Cold Spell To End Monday

A break in the cold spell that has held Vancouver Island and the lower mainland in a paralyzing grip for the last week is expected Monday.

The cold air mass covering B.C. is moving gradually east, and mild Pacific air is edging toward the coast with above-freezing temperatures.

Weatherman William Mackie said maximum and minimum temperatures will rise gradually with the onset of the mild air, which caused high cloud over the city today.

20 TONIGHT

"Our overnight minimum was 17.7 degrees, and tonight we are predicting 20 degrees," he said. "Friday's maximum temperature was 24 degrees, but we are expecting a maximum of 30 on Sunday."

Temperature at noon today was 25 degrees.

Children enjoying one of the best sessions of out-door skating won't be happy when warm weather comes, but to most of Victoria it will be a blessing.

WEARY

Plumbers have been working steadily at thawing pipes since the vicious wind of Friday morning (see page 15), and taxi drivers and delivery men are weary of fighting ice and snow on sidewalks.

Weekly report of the National Employment Service showed 700 more persons out of work now than at the same time last year, almost wholly because of adverse working conditions outdoors.

There are 4,058 persons out of work, said C. A. Mudge, manager of the local office, an increase of 219 in the past week.

ICEBREAKER

Island Comet of the Island Tug & Barge Co. fleet was used as an icebreaker this morning in the Inner Harbor between Johnson Street and Point Ellice bridges.

Boats at McKay-Cormack Ltd. and Fishermen's Wharf were reported frozen into their berths, and Gorge Boat House reported ice between the shore and dock.

'Cat's Meow' Not Worth $20,000 Now With Cat's Meowing

GLENDORA, Calif. (UP)—Occupants of a new $20,000 home — labeled as the "Cat's Meow"—today vowed to move out unless a cat which has been haunting the dwelling for the past 20 days with around-the-clock wails is found "dead or alive."

The cat is believed to be trapped somewhere within the walls of the new home.

"We can't stand it any longer," said Vincent Carta, "the meowing is driving us crazy."

PRAYER FOR TODAY

Thou, my Lord, silent before thy translators like a sheep that is dumb before its shearer, I would learn of thee. Let my honest and open life spill the wagging tongue. Help me extract from every knock a boost and to rejoice in my critics as the unpaid guardians of my soul; in Christ's name. Amen.

Hungary Holds Britons as Spies

VIENNA (Reuters)—Four British students missing in Hungary since Jan. 14 will be tried by Hungarian court on espionage charges a communique is issued in Budapest today said.

The four were arrested Jan. 17.

The four are Judith Cripps, 19, granddaughter of Sir Stafford Cripps; Roger Cooper, 21, a nephew of poet Robert Graves; Christopher Lord, 22, and his brother, Basil Lord, 23.

They entered Hungary Jan. 14 with a transit visa permitting them 24 hours to drive through the country to Austria.

The communique said the four had false documents which were issued "in the name of the Soviet kommandatura in Budapest on Jan. 12, 1956."

It said the four also were in possession of letters from Hungarian students who had fled to Britain.

"They had the task of obtaining details about the Soviet and Hungarian armies and about political and economic conditions in Hungary," the communique said.

A statement from the ministry of interior added that Cooper and Christopher Lord were in Hungary last November "without valid passports and both took part in activities of counter-revolutionary groups."

Northwest Hit by Sharp Earth Tremors

Residents of Fairfield and other low-lying, land-filled, marshy areas felt the brunt of earthquake tremors which rattled through the Pacific Northwest between 3.12 and 5.16 p.m. Friday.

There was no serious damage reported in the affected area bounded by Victoria, Gulf Islands, Lower Mainland, Everett, Seattle and Olympia, the centre estimated at about Everett.

Shock cracked a wall in an old building at Anacortes, the only damage reported, although houses trembled, lights swayed, plaster cracked and dishes rattled in many areas.

Dominion Astrophysical Observatory director Dr. R. M. Petrie said it could be considered only a mild shock and that observatory staff did not feel it because of the rocky nature of the terrain.

Some residents of Victoria felt a distinct jarring shock lasting several seconds, diminishing to a light vibration which lasted about a minute.

Geologists at the University of Washington, in Seattle, said their seismograph indicated the quake centre about 25 miles north, or Everett.

Kashmir Seizure Sparks Rioting

KARACHI, Pakistan (Reuters)—Steel-helmeted police clashed with angry crowds in Pakistani cities today as protests mounted against the integration of Kashmir into India.

Police hurled tear-gas bombs into a procession of several thousand outside the office of the Indian deputy high commissioner in Hyderabad, West Pakistan.

Reports reaching here said several police were injured in the crowd.

In Lahore, a parade of some 150,000 Pakistanis marched to the Indian high commission office carrying black flags. They burned an effigy of Indian Prime Minister Nehru in the street.

In Dacca, East Pakistan, black flags were draped from houses and people in the streets wore black badges with the words: "India, hands off Kashmir."

Offices, stores and schools shut down and black flags were hoisted following the midnight announcement in Jammu, Kashmir, that the part of Kashmir occupied by Indian troops now is "an integral part of the Indian Union." India and Pakistan occupy separate areas of Kashmir, divided by a cease-fire line.

The Karachi Morning News said that if the United Nations fails to settle the Pakistani-Indian argument over Kashmir, the issue will be decided by "the arbitration of war."

'FEEL SAFER' REMARK STIRS TEMPEST IN BRITAIN

'Go It Alone' Dulles 'Roaming Among Prickly Pears' Says Press

LONDON (UP)—British newspapers were up in arms today over U.S. Secretary of State Dulles' remark in a Senate committee hearing that he would feel safer in the Middle East without British or French soldiers at his side.

"Mr. (Go It Alone) Dulles insulted Britain again," said The Daily Sketch.

Many British newspapers carried a paraphrase of Dulles' remark as the sub-headline.

The influential Manchester Guardian said Dulles "is roaming again among the prickly pears of the English language." In its editorial The Guardian said Dulles did not mean what he said.

The Communist Daily Worker also exploited Dulles' remark. "Dulles takes new swipe at Britain," its headline read.

But the Times of London buried the remark in a story from Washington headlined "New Attack on Mr. Dulles."

The story spoke of a direct Democratic attempt to force his resignation.

The Daily Express said Dulles was speaking "off the cuff" and said he is "a man to whom the right words do not come easily."

Calling Dulles the most powerful diplomat of the age but not the most diplomatic, the Express said: "He is engaged in trying to improvise in haste an American policy for the Middle East where no American policy existed before. Before Mr. Dulles has finished with his task he may well feel 'a lot safer' to have the active support of Britain and France."

In its editorial, the Manchester Guardian said Dulles "has not yet matched in quality Defence Secretary Charles E. Wilson whose ineffectuality dividing the unemployed into 'bird dogs' and 'kennel fed dogs' for instance—are few, but roses."

"But Mr. Dulles may catch up by sheer accumulation."

Firm Policy Front Needed Against Russ

LONDON (UP)—Plans for a top-level meeting between President Eisenhower and Prime Minister Harold Macmillan are under way, diplomatic sources said here today.

The meeting will probably take place in March.

Present plans are to prepare the way for conference well in advance, by creating an improved atmosphere and by sorting out problems which require a priority settlement.

The meeting would be the first get-together between the president and a British prime minister since the ex-premier, Sir Anthony Eden, talked to Eisenhower a year ago in Washington.

Some British diplomats are advising against an immediate Macmillan-Eisenhower meeting, claiming it could give the impression that Britain's prime minister is rushing to Washington as "suppliant."

But top-bracket government quarters are anxious that the heart-to-heart talk should take place as soon as is feasible.

Suez Sore Point Needs Healing

Many British diplomats believe that such a meeting would help to end the tension between the two countries which resulted from the Anglo-French intervention in Suez and which has not been eased by Secretary of State Dulles' remarks on British military participation in the Middle East. (See below.)

Aim of British leaders appears to be to reshape the Anglo-American alliance and then turn to the international scene where the Anglo-American stand needs urgent clarification and some vital adjustments.

British leaders feel that there is no firm Western policy front at present toward Russia.

The absence of such a joint Western Middle-East policy is held to necessitate a clear definition of tasks, so that each of the Big Powers knows where it stands and where it is supposed to go.

British Defence Minister Duncan Sandys, on a visit to the U.S., is expected to put out the first feelers on the projected conference.

Late in the spring or in the early summer, Macmillan expects to meet the Commonwealth prime ministers, probably in London for talks on mending recent rifts and strengthening their bonds.

Soviet Warns U.K. on Eve Of U.S. Talks

LONDON (AP)—Moscow Radio took note Friday of pending British-American military talks by warning Britain: "Everyone knows how vulnerable the British Isles are in case of war."

A broadcast in English said U.S. governing circles have decided "they can play around unceremoniously with the destinies of nations and to further their plans they are ready to expose these nations to a lot of danger."

The Moscow commentator said, "nobody and nothing threatens Britain's security at the present time. It would be ridiculous and unnatural to put one's own country in mortal danger."

Sandys to Visit Ottawa Next Week

OTTAWA (BUP)—Britain's defence minister, Duncan Sandys, will come to Canada next week to confer with defence minister Ralph Campney, defence production minister C. D. Howe and the chiefs of Canada's armed services.

A defence official said Sandys probably would discuss closer integration of British and Canadian forces on North Atlantic Treaty service in Europe.

LACK OF CREDENTIALS KEPT CLAN CHIEF OUT

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP)—A Canadian immigration official said Friday night that Dame Flora MacLeod, chief of the Clan MacLeod, was refused entry to Canada because "she would have had a rough time getting back into the United States again."

Dame MacLeod arrived here for a press conference but neglected to bring any credentials.

Immigration officials said it was "for her own protection" that she was not allowed to enter Canada.

They allowed her to meet with newsmen in the immigration office and then she returned to Detroit.

Dame MacLeod is currently on a tour of the United States and plans to visit Toronto and Montreal later.

She told reporters she had forgotten to bring even a passport.

Fulton Wants Faster Action on Refugees

(From Times News Services)

Davie Fulton (PC-Kamloops), says the federal government is not bringing Hungarian refugees to Canada from Austria fast enough.

He said that the movement of refugees to this country should be considered a "crash operation." All the Hungarians Canada has agreed to accept should be brought in as quickly as possible.

Mr. Fulton said unless the Hungarian refugees are moved quickly from Austrian camps to other countries, including Canada, they would be subject to Communist propaganda "that all this talk about the Western nations receiving you is only talk."

Mr. Fulton spoke during debate on a supplementary $9,000,000 estimate for 1956-57, required to provide free transportation to Hungarians. The vote was approved.

Mr. Fulton said the federal government should play a greater role in helping the refugees fit into the Canadian way of life.

He urged establishment of federal reception centres where the immigrants could receive training. This approach would be better than sending them to individual homes.

Mr. Pickersgill disagreed. He said it is better for the Hungarians to live with Canadian families, so they can lead a normal Canadian life from the start.

Mr. Pickersgill said 15,000 Hungarians will be in Canada by the end of February. After March 1 another 13,000 would arrive but this did not mean the end of Hungarian immigration.

"We are going to take them as rapidly as we think they can be reasonably and readily absorbed. I think it would be imprudent to try to make hard-and-fast arrangements too far in advance."

Minister Clears Up Misconception

Mr. Pickersgill said he wanted to clear up a misconception that Hungarians received $3 a day on arrival in Canada.

The government had an agreement with Saskatchewan under which the province received $3 a day for each refugee while in a provincial reception centre. The government had agreed to pay other provinces if reception centres are required.

The government's program for Hungarians received the full support of F. D. Shaw (SSC-Red Deer). He said arrangements had to be made quickly and it was too early for the House to be criticizing what had been done.

Clarie Gillis (CCF-Cape Breton South) said many parts of Canada question the advisability of throwing so many Hungarians on the labor market at one time.

He could see no difference between a "Maritime refugee and a war-scarred refugee—one can get as hungry as the other."

"Let's not go overboard on sentiment and forget the things that are needed for our own people," Mr. Gillis said.

The government has negotiations under way for "a very large amount of transport" to meet an expected shortage of shipping for the movement of immigrants to Canada, Pickersgill said.

He said a shipping shortage was expected by April 1.

Howard Green (PC-Vancouver Quadra) urged improved immigration handling facilities in Britain.

The minister said they are being increased. A new office had been opened in Bristol and more space was being acquired in London and Glasgow.

Immigration Minister Pickersgill said he doesn't think a report that the Budapest opera company might come to Canada "ever was a serious proposition."

Thomas Barnett (CCF-Cornwall-Alberta) asked him what happened to the opera; why it was unable to come to Canada.

Mr. Pickersgill said there were about 1,300 members in the company. By the time he got "something like an accurate estimate" of its remaining members about 200 had already left Austria. He imagined these would be the more distinguished ones. Nearly all now had gone one place or another.

'DEAF IN ONE DUMB IN OTHER' CHIDES CCFer

OTTAWA (CP)—Clarie Gillis accused Immigration Minister Pickersgill Friday of making a "provocative" Commons speech on Hungarian immigration.

But the Cape Breton CCF member said he would excuse the minister, "as I always do, on the ground of political immaturity."

Noting Mr. Pickersgill at this point was chatting with Fisheries Minister Sinclair, Mr. Gillis called out: "Are you listening?" Then he added perhaps Mr. Sinclair wasn't helping matters any by holding his colleague's attention.

"I'm sorry," said Mr. Pickersgill, "I'm a little deaf in one ear."

"Deaf in one and dumb in the other," interjected Stanley Knowles (CCF, Winnipeg North Centre).

Mr. Pickersgill said the government is negotiating with provinces on dividing the cost of medical treatment for Hungarians. He said no costs would fall on municipalities.

Some refugees had received free passage and had returned their fares. If others with good jobs did the same "it would make a great impression on the Canadian public and make movements of this kind easier in the future."

Some refugees had received free passage and had returned their fares. If others with good jobs did the same "it would make a great impression on the Canadian public and make movements of this kind easier in the future."

Mr. Pickersgill said the government is negotiating with provinces on dividing the cost of medical treatment for Hungarians. He said no costs would fall on municipalities.

CITY'S SCOTS MARK BURNS' ANNIVERSARY

Rabbie and His Lassies? He Only Wrote of Them

By TONY DICKASON

Robert Burns, dead since 1796, came to life again Friday—as Scotland's bard does every January.

This anniversary was marked here yesterday by the Victoria Burns Club and the St. Andrew's and Caledonian Society.

This latter group dined at the Empress Hotel and Premier W. A. C. Bennett led the "grand march" to the ball later.

The Burns Club, 140-strong, met in Loughheed's banquet hall for a night of eulogizing. So forcefully was this handled, that a native of Liberia could not be left with other than fond thoughts of the Scots bard.

Take the sweet little 70-year-old lady who was on my left. She's grey, of course; Scots, of course, name of Mrs. Kate Bell. She's from the Clan Gordon.

Her family, she informs, is in part, ninth-generation Canadian. "But her feeling for the land is as strong as if she left last September."

Hubby, a war vet, has been in hospital for many a year. Mrs. Bell, who could be your mother, providing you are a nice person, hums to herself when the pipes play.

John Low did this. He practised in the place marked "Men" before appearing in front of the assembly.

ALL WELCOME
Scotland today embraces the world—as the old saying goes, there are Scotsmen and those who wish they were. Some present obviously were not Scotch but were as welcome as the Jolly Beggar's Punch which introduced the meal.

Can't delight and silver gleamed and sparkled under a portrait of Burns behind the head table and petite club president, Mrs. Angus McKay, who introduced the guest speaker. In dealing with a Burns' night, comments of the guest speaker are termed "To the Immortal Memory."

A Scotsman born, Brigadier J. Bryden Stevenson, Vancouver, with many a laugh and many a serious overtone, told what he thought of the poet.

NO DRUNKARD
Burns, he said, told sermons in "a handful of verses."

He left a legacy of the written word, combining broad Scots and English.

Burns, he went on, was no drunkard as detractors have claimed, but was more a student of human nature. In those dear dead days, there was no better place to view one's fellow man than the pub.

Burns and his lassies?
Burns' only fault: "He wrote poems about them."

Nobody could write in as sensitive a fashion as the Scots' poet could be gross, or bad, said the brigadier. It just was not possible in the same nature.

To quote Burns himself: "The rigid righteous is a fool."

One of the highlights of the evening were songs by Miss Marian Mitchell, whose low-appealing voice in the tartan-covered memory album evoked a moist eye here and there.

As a matter of fact, she made one a mile proud to be Scots, or even of the origin.

SUSPECT REMANDED
LANGLEY — John Ernest Gardiner, 20, charged with murdering James Martin, 45, last Aug. 10; was remanded in custody for the fourth time when he appeared before Acting Magistrate A. E. Roberts in Langley municipal police court Friday.

Soble Worked In Montreal

NEW YORK (AP) — Seventeen-year-old Lawrence Soble says he can't believe his mother and father were members of a Soviet spy ring.

The boy's father, Jack Soble, 53, his mother, Myra, 52, and Jacob Alham, 64, all of New York City, were arrested Friday by the Federal Bureau of Investigation. They were charged with collecting information about national defence for purposes of transmitting the information to Soviet Union or its agents.

In Montreal, Mrs. Hessel Chasen, sister of Jack Soble, said her brother spent 1954 in Montreal helping her husband operate a brush factory he owns at St. Martin, Que.

The FBI accuses the Sobles and Alham of a conspiracy dating back to 1947. Penalty, if convicted, could be either execution or life imprisonment.

Three Plans Before UN On Israel-Egypt Dispute

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (CP) — United Nations diplomats moved today into a week-end of intense preparation for a crucial debate on the Middle East dispute.

The debate is to start Monday in the General Assembly. The key point will be secretary-general Dag Hammarskjöld's 4,500-word report on Israel's delay in pulling her invasion forces back of the 1949 Palestine armistice line.

Israeli sources said Hammarskjöld's report was not clear enough, and declared it gave only a legal approach to a political problem.

Hammarskjöld informed the assembly Friday that Israel has not fully complied with five resolutions calling for withdrawal of its forces. He added that numerous political and legal barriers prevent the UN from accepting Israel's conditions for a complete withdrawal.

STILL HOLD TWO STRIPS
Israel still holds two areas seized in the October-November invasion—the Gaza Strip and the Sharm el Sheikh sector on the Gulf of Aqaba. Israel insists it must have firm guarantees that its interests will be protected before quitting those areas.

Israel was said to feel that Hammarskjöld's report harks back to the 1949 armistice, which Israel considers a failure and no solution to the problem.

The Israelis also were said to feel that the right of navigation in the Gulf of Aqaba is not an armistice question, but one of preventing belligerency.

Egyptian delegates declined to comment on the secretary-general's report, but Farid Zaideddine of Syria, a close ally of Egypt, termed it "fundamentally" a good one.

THREE POSSIBLE PLANS
Meanwhile, three main plans were being worked over the next round of debate:

1. The Western-sponsored resolution to give Hammarskjöld greater authority to deploy the UN Emergency Force in Egypt and give the force itself greater scope.

2. An Asian-African demand that stiff economic penalties be clamped on Israel.

3. A move by a group of neutrals to form a sort of "third force" in an effort to solve Arab-Israeli differences. There were no details on this plan.

Canada, Australia, New Zealand, Norway and other member states also were reported going over a plan to implement Hammarskjöld's report and increase the scope of the UN Emergency Force.

The Big Bite

THE HUGE EXPENDITURES forecast by the Federal and British Columbia Governments must have three effects on the ordinary family.

First, they assure increased public services. Second, they assure the maintenance of high tax rates. Third, they are certain to increase the upward pressure on all prices.

When Mr. Walter Harris, the national treasurer, asks Parliament to approve a budget of $5.2 billions in the next fiscal year he raises his peacetime expenditures to a new high.

While most of the increase is automatic and uncontrollable—such things as subsidies to the provinces, old age pensions, children's allowances and so on—there is no evidence of economy in Mr. Harris' new estimates.

All the pressures in Ottawa, from all the political parties, are for higher spending and these pressures originate with the public. Government spenders, from Ottawa to the smallest provinces, like private spenders throughout the nation, are enjoying an unexampled spree.

If this is what the taxpayers want it is what they are going to get. They should understand, however, that government spending is nothing more nor less than a demand for goods and services of all sorts when the supply already is insufficient to meet the total demand. Government—federal, provincial and municipal—is now by far the largest consumer and pushing up prices by its spending.

On the other hand, the Federal Government is trying desperately to damp down the inflationary fire by its so-called tight money policy, which produces high interest rates, and by spending less money than it collects.

When Mr. Harris asks Parliament to vote $5.2 billions (almost as much as we spent at the peak of the war) the important question is whether he intends to collect an even larger sum in taxes during the fiscal year beginning April 1. He will answer that question in his budget speech shortly. If he maintains existing tax rates, if the nation's total income, and hence its revenue yield grow at the expected rate, the next budget can produce another anti-inflationary revenue surplus. If Mr. Harris reduces taxes and eliminates the surplus he will make a sorry joke of his whole campaign against inflation.

Premier Bennett is not worrying about these problems as he prepares to introduce the largest budget in British Columbia's history. He is not worrying about inflation because he denies its existence, though any housewife could tell him different. Unlike Mr. Harris, in the current year, Mr. Bennett is spending every last cent he can lay his hands on and, to that extent, stimulates the inflation which he refuses to recognize.

There is no help in Mr. Bennett's policy for the taxpayer interested in taxes or the housewife interested in prices.

His latest gimmick—a flat rebate of $28 to all homeowners in the municipalities regardless of their individual circumstances—is a rather doleful piece of fiction. It only means that the Government will take money from one of the citizen's pockets and put it into another, less the cost of bookkeeping.

Citizens who do not own homes will be given the honor of contributing to this cost of some $9 millions a year without receiving any benefits themselves.

These arrangements are not really financial. They are political. And all the present budgetary forecasts offer no comfort for taxpayer or housewife.

The End of Dumping

AT LAST CANADA CAN FORE- see the end of American agricultural dumping, which has gravely damaged our wheat sales in foreign markets.

The United States Government has been giving grain away or selling it for soft foreign currencies under Public Law 480. Originally that law covered a period of three years and authorized the Government to spend $3 billions to cover the cost of giveaways.

In the fine print of his recent budget message it will be seen that Mr. Eisenhower now proposes to extend the law for only one year and to provide only $1 billion for that purpose.

This is interpreted in Washington as the death knell of the give-away policy. Since the three-year period expires at the end of June, 1957, a one-year extension should mean the end of dumping in the middle of 1958. By that time, presumably, the American Government expects the present huge surplus of cereals to disappear or at least to become manageable.

Meanwhile, however, giveaways will continue, perhaps at an accelerated rate, to the embarrassment of grain exporters like Canada.

The President asks Congress for power to barter farm surpluses for the goods of Communist countries. This evidently is an attempt to cut into some of cash markets that Canada has lately developed in such countries as Poland.

It will be difficult, if not impossible for Canada to meet this sort of artificial competition, financed by the long purse of the American treasury. But at least the end is now in sight.

Good, Clean Laughter

IN "LAUGHTER IS A WONDER- ful Thing," the biography Ralph Hancock wrote for Joe E. Brown, a simple and impressive statement is made. Brown says he never told a shady story.

Nature gave Joe E. Brown the face of a clown. He learned to live with it and to capitalize on the contortions he could perform with his facial muscles to the delight of movie-going millions.

This is the man who started his stage career in the burlesque theatre, where smut is the merchantable commodity. It speaks volumes for him that he had no occasion to resort to it—volumes, too, for the appreciation of the public which places him far above the characters of that dimly lit slum of the theatrical profession.

The simple message from Joe E. Brown (or should it be "Elmer the Great?") could well be a guiding principle for those who seek to bring the joy of laughter to a world which has never needed it more.

Time Capsule of the Mid-Century

SPEAKERS in a series of talks broadcast recently in the BBC's Home Service named the ten objects they would choose to represent the 1950's for posterity, in the event of another Flood, like that described in the Bible, destroying all other record.

E. Arnot Robertson, the novelist and critic, followed the precedent of Noah in sending entries into her ark for preservation in pairs—one object to show what outstanding people of the present day had achieved and discovered, and the other what ordinary people said and thought about the same subject.

"To start with the state of medical science," Miss Robertson said, "into my ark will go a film of that astounding new heart operation, first successfully performed in this decade, in which the blood is by-passed through a mechanical pump and the heart is actually stopped—temporarily immobilized by a drug—while the surgeon works on it, unhampered by the continual jerk of its powerful muscle. Then the blood is returned through the heart, which is started again. No doubt yet more remarkable operations will be done in the future, but that will give later scientists quite a good idea of how far we had got in such matters."

This item would be extremely misleading, she felt, without the second of the pair, a sound-recording, made in practically any suburban street, of two women talking about their ailments, which would reveal that, in spite of technical advances the attitude of many ordinary people to medicine was still founded on a belief in magic.

It would run something like this: "Stands to reason, it's got to get worse before it gets better." — "That's right, dear. You got to draw out the poison. What I mean, you don't want to drive it in with drugs, you want to draw it out by natural means. And mind you, whenever I get a touch of rheumatism in the spring, I carry a new potato about in my pocket for a week. It's always better on the sixth day."

A film of British ballerina Margot Fonteyn dancing "Firebird" or "Giselle" would be included both as "an exquisite example of the heights to which controlled physical movement can reach in our time," and as an illustration of the sudden tremendous rise during the 1950's in the popularity of ballet — "this most ethereal and yet most disciplined art-form."

"Side by side with it would go a film of perhaps still greater social significance showing "The Teddy Boy in full regalia at play, together with his tousled, somewhat pathetic girl-friend, rock'n'roll and rolling with embarrassingly self-conscious abandon."

She would include an example of au-

As Our Readers See It

Treachery

I am glad that the letters coming in lately have had the right idea about the troubles in the Middle East.

Of course Britain was right. If they had waited for the U.S.A. the third world war would have been well on the way. The U.S.A. kept out of the first war till it was nearly over; made money out of it, and then tried to take all the credit. And in the second one, stayed out till Japan turned on her, making money on that one too.

I am ashamed to be a Canadian after the part played by our Government. If Mackenzie King had been premier it would not have happened.

It was a great blow to us all when Anthony Eden had to quit. His health, I believe, was broken by the treachery of his friends. If it is important for any family to stick together, it should be just as important, for the Family of Nations—the British Empire.

Sport for Sport

In my opinion one of the most straight-forward statements ever uttered by the chairman of the school board was made Jan. 23. He, along with others, evidently realizes that true sportsmen as such are almost extinct in Victoria.

My experience has been that unless you pay big salaries, take in good gate receipts, provide uniforms, dugouts, etc., you can't attract either boys or girls into the field of sports for the exercise and enjoyment that is in good sport.

During my experience with people who are trying to organize and promote sport—they all sooner or later wound up with the same conclusions—namely you must have dugouts, gate receipts, uniforms and transportation to move boys or girls a few blocks to playoff games.

When, oh, when? Mr. Editor, are we going to depart from our mercenary ways and play like the old country Brits do?—where amateur sport is truly amateur—where money and uniforms mean little and the skill and thrill of perfection in sport is the true objective.

Remove Officers

Now that the CPR strike is (temporarily) settled, the Firemen's Union should lose no time in removing from office the stupid officials who led them into this disgraceful situation.

This will be necessary if the union is to recover from the serious blow dealt not only to it, but upon all unions. The union must know by now that the public in general, including a great number of union men, were solidly opposed to the firemen's strike and looked upon it as an outrage against the Canadian people. If we are to have a strike every time a labor-saving method or invention is introduced into industry, then the sooner strikes are outlawed the better. That problem was supposed to have been settled at the time of the Industrial Revolution in Britain more than one hundred and fifty years ago.

Our economy is being wrecked by this endless round of strikes, many, if not most of them, being initiated and directed by foreigners. The unions have done a splendid service to both the laboring man and to industry but they should realize that if they do not develop a new sense of responsibility and obligation to the people as a whole, unionism is doomed.

COMMON SENSE

Spirit Over Matter

I should like to thank T. Fox-Decent for his letter to The Times of Tuesday, Jan. 22.

In it is expressed the feeling of thousands of communicants who were equally shocked by the statements made by Drs. Glen C. Bending and George Elliot under the heading "Communism Cup Unsavory." One can be truly sorry for such people who are as those who "having eyes, see not." It would seem that this blind old world is now so deeply sunk in materialism that it is totally unable to discern the fact that Spirit, in the long run rules and must eventually over-rule the material if we are to survive as human beings.

The Christian Scientists do have this idea in mind, i.e. that mind governs matter! That is the centre of their religious thought. It has of course always been implicit in the teaching of the Christian Church.

LOOSE ENDS

The Revolution Rolls On

By BRUCE HUTCHISON

THIS week North America, on both sides of the border, has witnessed, without apparent public excitement, a huge stride in that process known roughly as the Welfare State. The social revolution launched by the great depression rolls on, no one knows exactly whither.

By an odd coincidence the latest advances in human welfare and big government were announced simultaneously in Washington and Ottawa. The United States and Canada moved along parallel roads toward a hoped but unknown goal.

In Washington President Eisenhower gave possibly the most important press conference of his career. Its importance was not generally noted north of the border.

THE President found himself in basic disagreement on vital policies with his able secretary of the treasury, Mr. Humphrey, and he tried, with notable lack of success, to dismiss this disagreement as superficial.

A few days previously the President had submitted a greatly-increased budget to the Congress, in total almost equal to the highest budget of President Truman, which Mr. Eisenhower had condemned as recklessly extravagant and promised to reduce drastically.

Mr. Humphrey immediately called in the newspapermen to say that he was unhappy about the budget; that if the Government continued to spend on this scale it would ultimately produce a depression that would "curl your hair"; and finally that he was flatly opposed to deficit spending and the philosophy of the late Maynard Keynes which now governs the policy of all Western nations, including Canada. If such notions were applied by the Eisenhower Government, Mr. Humphrey said, he would consider his resignation.

DENYING that he disagreed with Mr. Humphrey, Mr. Eisenhower made two statements of historic importance, both revealing that he disagreed with Mr. Humphrey and the entire right wing of the Republican Party.

He said, first, that if the American people demanded and deserved the kind of public services they were now receiving from his Government then the Government would have to spend on the present scale. Obviously they would have to spend more as their population grew and the social services expanded along the lines recommended by the President.

SECONDLY, asked whether he would use deficit spending and the Keynesian "compensatory" economics in the event of a depression, the President said he expected no serious depression but if it occurred he would do everything he could to subdue it, to the ultimate limits of his constitutional power. Obviously that included everything that Mr. Humphrey regards as disastrous.

Thus, in a few carefully-prepared sentences, the Republican President adopted as permanent policy the fundamental theory of the Democrats' New Deal. To the Republican Party Franklin Roosevelt's philosophy had been a heresy for some twenty-five years. This week it became orthodox, respectable, routine. The only change is a new name. Today the New Deal is called the New Republicanism. The Roosevelt revolution has been formally legitimized by its eneemies. It might as well be, for it is here to stay.

UP in Ottawa, where important things are usually accomplished without Washington's fanfare, the Canadian New Deal (never given that name) took on a large new dimension.

There were still a few details to iron out between the Federal Government and the provinces but the nation was about to embark on national hospital insurance, along the lines of the British Columbia system inaugurated by Mr. Byron Johnson. The great dream of Mr. Paul Martin, never shared by some of his colleagues, was coming true.

Thus the foundations of the Canadian welfare state were being fully rounded out and the policy of Mackenzie King, announced in 1943, was just about complete.

We have pensions for the old, state subsidies for the young. We are to have public health services for all. That cradle-to-grave care which was once a wild, socialistic idea will soon be a commonplace. Above all, and underlying all, is the state's control of the money system, which must finance all these services and generally manage the national economy.

WE are completing, in short, the whole anatomy of a new social system and can continue to expand it without shedding a drop of blood. A revolution is being consummated without even a bloody nose.

If this is gratifying and clearly is the will of both North American peoples, we do not know yet whether we can manage the new system. We cannot be quite sure that Mr. Humphrey is wrong. The real test is just now beginning. If we cannot control an inflationary boom before it becomes a bust, Mr. Humphrey will be proved right.

WHEN WE WERE VERY YOUNG

By GUS SIVERTZ

Shivering Horses, Cold Winds, Warm Hearts

ON just such days as this, when a thin frozen snow covered the rock-hard ground and a north wind whipped gleefully straight down from the Arctic, I used to be so sorry for the express men's horses which stood in woebegone ranks on lower Yates.

And I spared some of my sympathy for the poor express men themselves as they huddled, red-nosed and white-eared in sheltered nooks along that busy street.

But it was the horses that moved me most as they tried to turn away from the chill wind while their poor thin blankets flapped in such a forlorn way on their backs. Not all had blankets. I remember one scrawny beast whose bony back was barely covered by old sacking, and his driver, I'm sure, spent most of his time in a nearby saloon, putting a further polish on a florid and bulbous nose.

I would sit on the seat of George Clark's cart holding the lines of old Bess while he filled the box with groceries from the dark caverns of Simon Leiser's wholesale supply house. Bess had on a good thick blanket and I was snugly wrapped in another, so we felt far removed from the row of ill-groomed nags that stood in patient ranks in express men's row.

Team His Pride
Mind you, some express men took exceeding good care of their horses—and of themselves. One was Mr. Montero, a huge genial colored man—I believe he was a Jamaican—whose team was his pride. But I couldn't say as much for his rig. It was no doubt a stout-built Bain or Studebaker wagon originally, but time and Mr. Montero's weight had wrought strange changes in it.

For Mr. Montero was a very generously built man, weighing perhaps as much as 300 pounds and, from years of attempting to hold up this fantastic load, the sunk almost to the right side of his seat had more people were consulting psychiatrists than ever before. "The 1950's," Miss Robertson concluded, "are a rich, varied, fascinating time to be alive, but that ark of mine, if it really does its job, is going to carry a very peculiar load."

Montero's team always looked sleek and had the shiny coats that speak of good grooming.

Also on the expressmen's rank was a team owned by another fine Negro, Mr. Alexander, who I believe was related to Mr. Montero but resembled him not in the least. Mr. Alexander was as lean and spare as Mr. Montero was fat and he sported a truly amazing pair of moustaches that flaired out below his nose and wiggled when he talked—which was often enough. He too was a good horseman and kept his animals and rigs in good shape.

These were two of a number of very fine Negro citizens in Victoria in the first decade of this century. Indeed I fail entirely to remember that there was any such thing as a "color bar" at that time. Certainly we played with the Alexander children and the Carter boys and sat with them in school, oblivious of any differences between us.

Of course, there were smart-alecks who twitted the Negro children just as they teased any whom they thought less fortunate than themselves, but their number was small.

Once when one of these yahoos was teasing a group of Alexander children—they were quite a flock—one of them raced into the house and came out staggering under the weight of a huge horse pistol, probably a relic of the Civil War, which he pointed waveringly at his tormentors and warned them:

"Now you jest get right off my 'randah or I'll shoot you with my granddier's pistol."

He won, and my how he strutted.

Fine Families

Another fine family was that of George Carter who was somehow connected with the Canadian Customs and whose fine, tall, figure could be seen in all weather, striding down to the docks. He had two sons, Roy and Eddie, who were about as nice a couple of boys as you would find anywhere. They were soft-spoken with that throaty, musical intonation which is characteristic of many of their race.

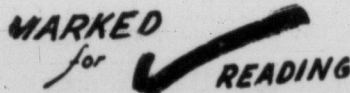

Then there was Bob Gilbert who operated a shoe shine stand on Yates Street. Bob was one of those happy beings who appear to radiate goodwill and gaiety so that one feels warmed in their very presence.

I met Bob much later when he was a good buck private in the Canadian Expeditionary Force and he had not lost any of his radiance even in the bitter cold of the '16-'17 winter after the Somme and before Vimy.

Later that year, at Passchendaele Bob was commended for good work in capturing a group of Germans single-handed. I asked him how he managed to get away with it alone.

"Well," he said, "I just don't know but I think maybe I was the first white man then Henries ever seed."

It was a good thing to have known those boys.

MORE HOUSES, MORE SPARROWS

During the last hundred years or so the house sparrow has doubled the amount of the earth's surface that it occupies. Before this expansion the house sparrow was confined to Europe, West and Central Asia, parts of India and Burma, North Africa and the Nile valley, and that was all—a mere 6,000,000 or so square miles. Its subsequent expansion has gained it slightly more again than this figure, so that it now lords it over about a quarter of the earth's surface.

—H. N. Southern talking on "Birds in Britain."

THE SEA SHALL HAVE THEM

The sea appeals to the British on at least two levels. It attracts the adventurous, practical men who make a career of it until the sea becomes known and ordinary. But it also attracts the other pole of our character, the visionaries, the rebels, the misfits who are seldom conscious of their own nature.

—William Golding, the novelist.

RHAPSODY

There's a story that two Englishmen were walking to their club in London one evening. "Lovely sunset, isn't it?" said one. The other glanced at him uncomfortably. "Even if it is, there's no need to have about it like a blooming poet," he replied.

—Geoffrey Bournemouth speaking on the British characteristic of understatement.

This Our Writ

IN the twenty-fifth year of the reign of King Edward the First, the one to whom Sassenach history books refer as The Hammer of the Scots, was enacted a statute which the people of England were rather particular about. It first appeared in the reign of King John, and was known as Magna Carta; in each succeeding reign the King was made to agree all over again that "No man shall be taken or imprisoned or life and limb, nor be disseised or put out of his freehold, franchises or liberties or free customs, nor be outlawed or exiled or otherwise destroyed unless he be brought in to answer and be judged of the same by due course of law; nor shall the King pass upon him, nor condemn him, but by lawful judgment of his peers or by the law of the land; and the King shall sell to no man, nor deny or defer to any man, either justice or right."

It is that same statute which is part of the law of British Columbia today, and let it be noted that it exists for the benefit of every man; not every Canadian man, or every rich man or every poor man; just every man who may happen to drift into the realms of Queen Elizabeth, whatever his state or condition. And it is upon this unique guarantee of liberty that Mr. Justice Sullivan based his judgment in giving the now celebrated writ Hanna a hearing.

Much has been made of the plight of Hanna. There have been questions in Parliament, editorials in the press, talks on street corners and arguments in bars. It is a great thing that his situation has stirred up so much controversy in the country.

But the real issue is not the individual Hanna. He is no more important in the case than is Mr. Pickersgill. The real question is whether or not an individual can be pushed around in this country without having been "prejudged of the same by due course of law."

In Magna Carta, which was no more than an acknowledgment by the King of the common law, we hear our forebears stating clearly their rights, which were not obtained without difficulty. The Baron's War, the Civil War, the Glorious Revolution are all instances of the obstinate insistence by the Anglo-Saxons on having their personal liberty dealt with by the law and nothing else.

To ensure that no person is denied justice or right, the Judges invented the high prerogative writ of habeas corpus; and King Charles the Second (who had his troubles with his Parliaments) assented to an Act which formally recognized the writ. Last weekend the captain of the Gudveig received a Greeting from our Queen: We command you that you have in Our Supreme Court of British Columbia at Vancouver, immediately after the receipt of this Our writ, the body of Christian George Hanna being taken and detained under your custody as is said, together with the day and cause of his being taken and detained, by whatsoever name he may be called therein, to undergo and receive all and singular such matters and things as Our said Court shall then and there consider of concerning him in this behalf. And have there then this Our writ.

A command like that leaves the person to whom it is addressed little choice. Punishment for disobedience is swift and drastic. So the body of Hanna was duly brought before one of Her Majesty's Judges, who in due course will make inquiry into the whys and wherefores of the detaining of that body, against its owner's will. So far, the law is on top, and the Gudveig having sailed from these shores, the question of what to do with the body should His Lordship find that the law has been duly observed becomes slightly academic. But this is neither here nor there. What is important is that this stateless stray has been given his day in Court.

There are many important details which have, like barnacles, become attached to the writ of habeas corpus. For instance, an application for a writ takes precedence over everything else. Counsel has only to get up and say, "My Lord, I have an application concerning the liberty of the subject," and forthwith the Judge puts everything else aside to hear him. And then, if this Judge refuses to grant a writ, counsel can go to the next one, and so on until he has polled every Judge of the Supreme Court individually. Each must hear the application afresh and with an open mind.

This column once before drew attention to the old-fashioned inefficiency of this procedure. But nothing else has ever yet proved more efficacious in preventing abuses to the poor bedevilled citizen of our creeping super-State.

Diefenbaker Charges Gov't Rooks Taxpayer

OTTAWA (CP) — John Diefenbaker accused the Liberal administration Friday night of picking the Canadian taxpayer's pocket far beyond the needs of government.

"To put it bluntly," the national leader of the Progressive Conservative party said, "the government is careless with your money."

In a radio speech he said that by the end of November, every man, woman and child in Canada had been over-taxed by $24 beyond what was required by the government.

"In effect, it picked your pockets far beyond the needs of government."

The purchasing power of Canadian dollars was melting. One reason was that the government did nothing effective to reduce its own "unnecessary and wasteful expenditures." It spent more each year; it seemed "to like being careless with your money."

"The ministers take money from you beyond what is needed be-

Surplus Now $361 Millions--- 7 Times Higher Than Year Ago

OTTAWA (CP) — The government, with a huge surplus on its hands, went into the red in December as spending began to climb.

The deficit of $26,480,000 in December, however, was just about half the $49,507,000 deficit in the same month a year ago, the monthly treasury statement showed Friday.

It pared the surplus for the first nine months of the current fiscal year to $361,121,000. This was still seven times as great as the $56,147,000 surplus in the first nine months of 1955-56.

The fiscal year ends March 31 and usually bills pile up in the final months. The government ended the last fiscal year with a deficit of $51,000,000.

This year Finance Minister Harris has forecast a surplus of $113,000,000, but he may actually have a surplus of $300,000,000.

In December, the take from taxes and other revenue sources rose to $414,612,000, a gain of $42,000,000 over the previous year.

SPENDING CLIMBS But spending rose to $441,092,000, up $19,000,000 from December a year ago. Major increases were in payments to provinces, veterans and for transport.

For the nine months, revenues climbed to $3,639,539,000, up by about $600,000,000 from the previous year. Government spending increased by about $250,000,000 to $3,278,418,000.

December brought a continuing rise in tax collections. Personal income taxes increased to $109,933,000, some $15,900,000 higher than December, 1955.

Corporation income tax increased by about $4,000,000 to $87,870,000.

Taxes in goods appeared to have reached some sort of plateau. Import duties, $35,961,000, were virtually unchanged from December, 1955. Excise duties slipped by about $300,000 to $22,032,000, while sales taxes edged up to $56,034,000 from $54,000,000 in the previous year.

Defence spending dropped by about $7,000,000 to $145,185,000 though the nine-month total of $1,231,281,000 was about $35,000,000 higher than in the similar 1955-56 period.

Locked in Room, Four Children Burn to Death

CLINTON, Iowa (AP) — Four small children, whose mother said she inadvertently locked them in a bedroom, were burned to death Friday when fire swept their second-storey apartment. Mrs. Harrison Guy told county officials she locked the bedroom door when she went to visit neighbors shortly after lighting a fire in a coal stove. The children ranged in age from five months to five years.

The original Santa Claus, the 4th-century Bishop St. Nicholas, had his home in southern Turkey.

The British Defence Cuts

The United Nations debate on disarmament had scarcely started when an announcement came from London that Britain was making important cuts in her defence expenditures.

The British announcement was not linked to anything that was being said here; rather, it was a unilateral action by a government determined to cut its costs, and obviously in doubt about the value of heavy spending to maintain substantial armed forces.

What influenced Britain's actions was not so much the high-sounding phrases about the merits of turning guns into plowshares; a more potent factor was that Britain made a serious effort to employ her armed might last November in Egypt, and got nothing for her pains but shame and abuse, plus an economic crisis.

It was obvious after the Suez episode that Britain would question the wisdom of continued top-level spending on defence, whatever her sometime Allies might think. And there is reason to believe that in making cuts as she has, she may have set an example that will be followed in short order by other nations, excepting only Russia and the United States.

Prior to the British action it was generally believed that world disarmament would go no farther, and proceed no faster, than Russia and the United States were prepared to permit. According to this school of thought, action on disarmament could be expected only when the United States and the Soviet Union agree on the practical steps.

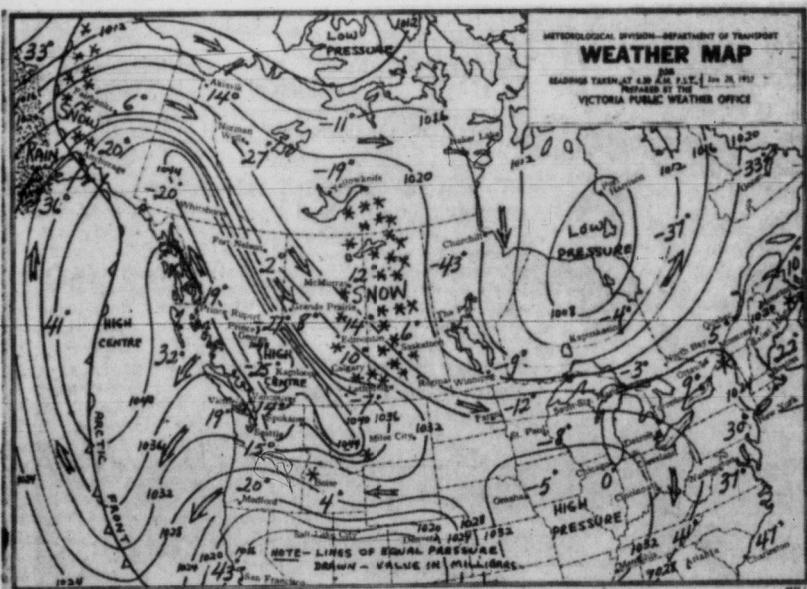

Now, it appears that may no longer be true, and that other nations may adopt disarmament measure of their own, independently of what Russia and the United States may choose to do.

These are the only two powers in the world today that are capable of waging full-scale modern warfare. The disarmament debate now going on in the political committee of the General Assembly, as distinct from what nations like Britain may decide to do independently, revolves around the positions adopted by Washington and Moscow.

It is a debate that seems unlikely to lead anywhere, and it seems that the most to be hoped is that it will create a reasonable climate for the next meeting of the five-nation subcommittee of the UN disarmament commission. This subcommittee, consisting of the United States, Russia, the United Kingdom, France and Canada, probably will meet in London in March.

WEEKEND WEATHER PICTURE ACROSS CANADA

SYNOPSIS — Overnight temperatures in B.C. ranged from 10 to 20 above along the coast and 25 to 35 below in the central interior, marking the sixth successive day of the current cold spell but the end is now in sight. Relatively warm Pacific air caught up in a circulation by way of Alaska and the Yukon is beginning to penetrate the northern reaches of B.C. Southward drift of this air mass will bring about a gradual modification in the southern regions of the province but the process will take another two or three days to register its effect.

O'Hara Censorship A Personal Affair

Critic Defends 'Artistic Integrity'
Of Novel Recently Banned in Detroit

The censors are at it again—and on the same tired old grounds as always—not in this country this time but down south in the land of the free—in Detroit, to pinpoint the scene of the big stick. The book in question is John O'Hara's second-last book, Ten North Frederick. The instigator of the censorship is Police Commissioner Edward S. Piggins, who said, "I would not want my sons to read this book."

Scott

If the commissioner is an average parent there are probably a good many things which he would not want his sons to do but which, nevertheless, are not forbidden by law. Why, in the matter of local censorship, an official can make his own law is something which I, as an outsider, would not think was in the spirit of the constitution of the United States. Ten North Frederick has hit the U.S. best-seller lists but has not been widely popular in Canada, largely because it is indigenous to the American scene and has not such a strong appeal for Canadians.

Evasive Comment Tags Book 'Boring'

But in my own opinion, this book is a good book. I cannot go along with—and indeed I was rather disappointed in one Canadian commentator who tried to evade the entire issue by charging that the book was no good anyway, merely boring.

There is a school of thought which always takes the line on a painful matter such as this, "that try. Whether or not the Detroit police commissioner wants his sons always boring. Nothing could be farther from the truth."

It can be boring, sure, but sometimes it is part of a distinguished author's technique, fully justified by its own artistic integrity. I have great respect for John O'Hara's writing capacity (even though I was sadly disappointed in his latest book, A Family Party).

I don't think it is fair to an author or O'Hara's reputation to imply censorship that he was pandering to the tasteless readers of his country. Whether or not the Detroit police commissioner wants his sons always boring, nothing could be farther from the truth.

Sicilian Mood Evoked in Travel Tale

To break away from such alarming and unpleasant topics, let us take an out-of-season look at a book called Easter in Sicily by Herbert Kubly.

This is one of the best travel books I have read since Elliot Paul's Springtime in Paris which means, of course, that strictly speaking it is not a travel book at all, but a skilful evocation of the mood and atmosphere of some place outside the ken of stay-at-home Canadians.

Mr. Kubly, whose previous work I do not know, has implanted into this book about the entire island of Sicily, a warm humanity of approach which makes this not only informative reading but a stimulating experience.

You can read this book and know from the detailed descriptions of all parts of Sicily, what goes on there and how best to get there if you should ever want to make such a trip.

You can read this book and come away feeling that you know this region's romantic and checkered history. You can read this book and feel that you now know something of the Sicilian character and how it came to be formed. And you can come away from this book feeling that you have made a host of new and fascinating friends.

All these things put together between hard covers make this a most successful piece of writing. It is a long while since I have felt that I had learned so much from a single book so painlessly. Indeed it was not just the absence of pain, but the sheer delight which the book engendered that made it so successful for me.

I hope that Mr. Kubly takes a lot more trips to other faraway fields and that he brings them into my library as green as Easter in Sicily.

Action-Packed 10 Days

THE INTRUDER by Storm Jameson, The MacMillan Company, Toronto, 233 pages, $2.75.

The fact that most of her books have been translated into nine other languages supports the claim that Storm Jameson is one of the most distinguished women writers of the day.

While her native Yorkshire has showered honors upon her and her novels are traditionally English in character their appeal is universal.

"The Intruder" covers a period of only ten days and the action takes place in the savage hill-country of Provence, where archaeologists are digging up a Celtic-Ligurian city.

Into the ten days she has packed all the elements of a tense story. It is a study of hatred, obsessions, suspense, cruelty, love, sensuality and original sin, told with shrewd candour.

Author's Fellow-Citizens Resent Novel's Small Town Reflections

By JACK MALOY
United Press Staff Correspondent

GILMANTON, N.H. (UP)—The author of the best-seller, "Peyton Place" isn't taking time out to celebrate her new-found fame and fortune.

Thirty-two-year-old Grace Metalious whose earthy novel of small town life in New Hampshire is a current sensation of the literary world, is busy writing her second novel.

What with taking care of her three children, writing, and making frequent visits to her New York publisher, she has a full work schedule.

Mrs. Metalious has signed a contract for three more books, and reports she has completed about 100 pages of her new novel, titled "The Tight White Collar." This book also will deal with small town life in New Hampshire, she said, but emphasized that it will be no "carbon copy" of "Peyton Place."

ABOUT A TEACHER

The title comes from the central character in the book, an underpaid school teacher. Mrs. Metalious still feels his contract with authority on that subject—her husband, George, served as principal at Gilmanton elementary school last year at an annual salary of $3,000.

Now he is teaching in the high school at Stowe, Mass. Mrs. Metalious still feels his contract at Gilmanton wasn't renewed because reports circulated around Gilmanton before publication that "Peyton Place" was a real shocker.

George commutes on week-ends to the couple's Cape Cod house on a back road in Gilmanton. With book store cash registers ringing out a fast rhythm to the sale of the book, the couple is happily engaged in restoring the 150-year-old house. Now that they no longer have to pinch pennies they've added a telephone and bought a jeep.

Mrs. Metalious has found, like other small town authors who wrote novels with small town backgrounds, that a certain amount of resentment results.

WRITING SINCE 12

Speaking of the attitude of her fellow townspeople since the book came out she said tersely, "They act like they could live without me."

How did she come to write the book?

"I've been scribbling since I was 12, just for my own amusement," she said. "I was married at 17 and never attended college but I'm a voracious reader."

"When George came out of the Army and began teaching school in different small towns in New Hampshire the idea for a novel came to me gradually and got to be something I just had to put on paper. It took me a year to think over and nine months to write. It was George's idea to submit it to a publisher. I had never even tried to sell a short story before. But with luck and the help of a wonderful agent the book was accepted."

With the acceptance came a financial bonanza. "Peyton Place" has been a best seller since its publication, is being translated into a number of foreign languages, and Mrs. Metalious said, has sold to a motion picture company for $125,000.

THE STAMP CORNER

By REG NAIRNE

Here is an interesting example of the sudden rise in the value of the United Nations stamps, which took place last year.

One of the largest stamp firms in the U.S. specializes in frequent mail auctions. In sending out lots to successful bidders—all by first-class registered mail—this company uses about $125,000 worth of postage annually.

As a favor to their customers, all letters are sent from the United Nations post office, franked with special UN stamps instead of the common issues of the U.S.A.

It has been estimated that the stamps that the auction buyers got on their mail have appreciated to such an extent that they would now have a retail value of $500,000!

Our current 3c stamped envelopes have been seen in a pale milky blue shade instead of the normal medium blue color. They seem to be quite scarce.

A columnist in an English philatelic magazine recently suggested that the Canada 20c grey stamp, overprinted "G." which

Soloist Has Tough Assignment In Brilliant Berlioz Number

To whatever legitimate criticism our symphony programs may be open, no one I think could accuse us of lack of enterprise. This leads me to that incredible, not to say, unlikely, creation of Berlioz, "Harold in Italy," which figures on the program of the next pair of symphony subscription concerts one week from tomorrow and Monday.

I feel I must discuss this work with you a little bit, being, frankly, careful not to mislead you in your expectations, and that means in particular those of you who may be familiar with this work via recordings; which is, indeed, almost certainly the only way probably any of you could have come to know it, for I should be amazed if any of you had ever experienced a live performance of "Harold."

It was none other than the "diabolical" Paganini who commissioned Berlioz to provide him with a showpiece for VIOLA and orchestra — NOT violin, this time. And the result, for a promised 20,000 francs, was "Harold in Italy," a musical portrait of Byron's "Childe Harold" as wildly imaginative as it is undisciplined.

Paganini rejected the work when the composer brought him the completed commission (though, for the record, Paganini kept his financial part of the bargain).

And the reason Paganini rejected the work was not for its undisciplined technique of composition, but simply because it provided entirely insufficient virtuoso material for the viola solo, it being, in fact, almost completely and throughout submerged under the wild orchestral outbursts.

What Berlioz came up with was very far from the virtuoso display for the soloist that Paganini had in mind. What he came up with was some sort of huge symphony with a solo viola obbligato, and that heard only from time to time.

ARTIFICIAL BALANCE

Here I must, in all fairness, warn you then that recordings may have misled you as to the real, not artificial, prominence of the solo part. You will often SEE the soloist fiddling away like possessed, but you will NOT HEAR him nearly so often or prominently as artificial recording balance would suggest.

That is not to say that the soloist may as well pack up and go home. Far from it.

The color would be destroyed without the efforts of the soloist, as would the intentions of the composer.

"Harold in Italy" is, in short, a flagrantly ungrateful piece for the viola-virtuoso to sweat over, as it is ungrateful for those listeners who either do not perceive the unusually subtle role assigned to the soloist, or who delight excitedly in obvious and clearly audible pyrotechnics on the part of the soloist without reference to their musical worth.

At the same time — adding insult to injury from the soloist's point of view — his subtle and seemingly unspectacular role is, in fact, fiendishly difficult, frustratingly unprovoking of wild applause on the part of an uninitiated audience.

VIOLISTS TASK

The vast majority of even famous orchestras must import specialized solo-exponents of the viola, of the order of William Primrose, before being able to consider a performance of "Harold in Italy." Precious few of them can entrust their own principal viola with this quite fearful task.

I know of no other orchestra in existence that operates with in shouting distance of our modest budget that could fish out from amongst its own ranks a violinist at all able to cope with the solo-part of "Harold."

HARRY GOMEZ

Nor do I know of such an orchestra except ours that could begin to play this treacherous piece as a whole. This is something for professional virtuoso-outfits. This is neither a joke nor fun.

It is truly hard work for an orchestra, usually undertaken, like other trying work, for money. Our musicians do it out of different motives, for money, to put it mildly, cannot be considered in their case to be even a minor inducement.

LOYAL PUBLIC

They do it, partly out of pride, but perhaps chiefly as a public service to the loyal, perceptive, even knowledgeable public with which we are blessed, and also out of gratitude to all the voluntary workers who strive and sweat behind the scenes to provide us with so ideal a psychological climate for our work.

These voluntary, dedicated workers include the box-office committee and the treasurer, and we should certainly not be helping them, or ourselves, if I in public print issue what could be misconstrued as a WARNING AGAINST a piece of music on a program.

I felt I had to be frank with you concerning "Harold in Italy," or rather what to expect in the way of re-incarnating the legendary "diabolical" Paganini. It is, now, with no lesser truth that I can, in fact, wholeheartedly recommend your coming to acquaint yourselves with Berlioz and his "Harold" for it is one of the authentic and, for the listener, most rewarding showpieces in the orchestral literature, if not in the concerto literature.

And, in any case, if you allow yourselves to miss the amazing Bizet symphony on the same program, the fact is that it is you who will be the heavy losers. Yes, it is by the same Bizet who wrote Carmen — but more about that next week.

Reputations On Records

The influence of the phonograph on American musical life continues to grow. Paul Kletzki and Andre Cluytens, whose conductorial reputations in this country are largely based on their records, have been engaged as guest conductors of major American orchestras for next season.

Kletzki, who has built a big European reputation in the last 10 years and is known to Americans through his recordings with the London Philharmonic and the Israel Philharmonic, will conduct the Philadelphia Orchestra in February of 1958 both in Philadelphia and New York.

Cluytens, who is permanent conductor of the Paris Conservatory Orchestra and was one of the two conductors of the Vienna Philharmonic during its recent tour of the United States, will be a guest conductor of the New York Philharmonic-Symphony during the 1957-58 season.

The Madeleine Renaud-Jean-Louis Barrault Company, whose first visit here was one of the high points of the 1952-53 theatre season, will return to New York for a four-week engagement at the Winter Garden, beginning Jan. 30. Again the troupe will be presented by S. Hurok, under the auspices of the French government.

Madeline Renaud, Simone Valere, Marie-Helene Daste, Pierre Bertin, Barrault and Jean Desailly will again head the company's roster. They will appear in eight productions on six different bills. None of the plays was in the company's 1952 repertoire.

THE SOUNDING BOARD

New Civic Project Suggested; Commemorate the Dead and Gone

By AUDREY S.T.D. JOHNSON

The days of January are running out; the new year doesn't seem quite so new and in spite of the frosting on the piece of cake that is our Victoria, we all know that the season of spring and gardens, to say nothing of fishing and swimming the straits, is just around the corner.

Lucky us! To live in a garden of Eden where any untoward effort in the direction of artifice and sophistication is regarded as flying in the face of nature.

Which reminds me of certain New Year resolutions I made, the most important of which concerns readers of this column.

As the dawn of 1957 broke I reflected back on my mis-spent, wasted hours of 1956 and resolved to do better with the new 12 months. I resolved, for example, not to waste my time knocking the knockers as obviously there have always been knockers and always will be because that's the only way some people are happy.

And I resolved not to have any of logging and hydrogen bomb tests, rain will have ceased to fall, soil will be eroded and taints and all garden enthusiasts will have decamped for greener fields. Which, of course will practically leave this tip of Vancouver Island depopulated.

But most important of all, I resolved not to say another solitary word about building an auditorium in Victoria. Because how can I go screaming around that an auditorium is absolutely essential if at least 20,000 other people don't think so too?

I would look pretty silly if a 2,000-seat auditorium was built on my say-so and there I sat all alone in the middle of it. Serve me right too, for having egged the civic bodies on to erect something that could only be a monument to failure.

You see, at our present rate of progress, I am pre-supposing such an auditorium would be completed, at the earliest, in 1970. By which time I am also pre-supposing that several things will have come to pass:

That (a) with the speed-up of the High Iron" is an innocuous film which sets itself to prove that it pays to be yourself whether you live in a penthouse or on the wrong side of the tracks.

As is usually the case in such pictures as these the characters are painted too black or too white. So in the end the film holds all the allure of pulp fiction.

More interesting than the plot itself, however, is the manner in which little known actors such as Don Taylor, Sally Forrest and Raymond Burr conduct themselves before the lens.

Some indeed may yet rise from the "Grade B" category of their pictures and emerge into fine thespians with a little more experience — or fade into oblivion.

As each year passes it becomes increasingly evident that writers of westerns are groping desperately for new endings for old plots. This is understandable because almost since the inception of motion pictures the western adventure has been the No. 1 favorite of millions as escape drama and it is becoming extremely difficult to find something to say that has not already been said.

Nonetheless, it is equally evident that truly good westerns like "Stage Coach," "High Noon," "Shane" and "Escape From Fort Bravo" are as rare as the writers of outstanding western stories, like Max Brand and Luke Short, and western fans must get used to this idea.

Cluytens, who is permanent conductor of the Paris Conservatory Orchestra and was one of the two conductors of the Vienna Philharmonic during its recent tour of the United States, will be a guest conductor of the New York Philharmonic-Symphony during the 1957-58 season.

Violin Virtuoso Plays Devil-Inspired Music

By HUMPHRY DAVY

The name "Devil's Trill" has always stuck to Giuseppe Tartini's Sonata in G minor. It was one of those pieces made famous by legend and which appeals to the imaginations of violinists.

Tartini, the son of a nobleman, was one of the most colorful figures in his time (1692-1770). He enjoyed widespread fame as a swordsman and as a brilliant musician — a handy combination in those troublous times in Italy.

His account of how he wrote the Devil's Trill goes this way. One night he had a dream that he made a bargain with the devil for his soul. He exchanged it for power and glory.

On the reverse side, the two famous musicians play Mozart Sonata No. 32, K.454. This sonata is regarded as one of Mozart's best.

At the time Tartini had good reason to be seeing devils. He was hiding from a cardinal for secretly marrying a niece of the prince of the church. He was troubled at the prospect of rotting in a dungeon.

When he awoke, the musician tried to reproduce the sound he had heard. He admitted, however, that what he wrote, is inferior to the music he heard in his dream.

In assessing the piece, we must give the devil his due —

"7TH CAVALRY" AND "RIDE THE HIGH IRON" (Odeon):—Although neither picture can be called extraordinary, the Odeon's double bill offers an interesting study in contrasts.

In "7th Cavalry," Randolph Scott, who by now must have met more Indians than Custer, winds up being entirely surrounded by Redskins but is saved, not by the hard-riding U.S. Cavalry that has possibly saved more lives than penicillin, but by a horse believed by the Indians to be the ghost horse of the departed Lieut. Col. Custer.

dogs away for the price of one to the first person who could spot the twins. Which are they?

Take Any Piece of Paper And You Can Do a Trick

You have seen conjurers work magic with paper. You can also. Here's how to make a paper ladder:

Take a sheet of paper two feet long and eight inches wide and roll it up into a close tube. Next cut three-quarters of the way through the tube, two inches from each end, leaving sufficient paper to hold the three parts together. Bend down the half-cut ends.

Now cut along and through the center roll by placing the knife on the top of the center tube, at the first half-cut, and cut out the center of the tube, to the second half-cut. Flatten out the center rungs of the ladder, open the paper and you will find one long ladder.

First practice with a small tube of paper and you will soon be able to use larger sheets of paper for making your ladders. A mystifying trick in which small discs of paper are made magically to disappear as performed as follows:

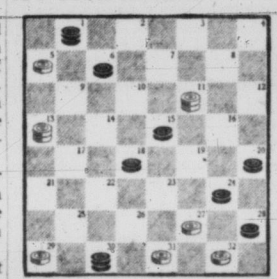

Cut out of a sheet of paper six discs about the size of a dime and stick them on the blade of a table-knife, three on each side. The magician announces that he will remove two of the discs, which he apparently does by placing his left forefinger and thumb above and below the knife. These he crumples up and throws away. Then the conjurer displays the knife with only two discs on each side. Next he removes two more discs in the same way, one on each side of the blade. Finally he takes off the two remaining discs, and shows the knife-blade to be clean.

Now the magician waves the knife in the air and on display it to his audience the six discs are seen on the blade!

Take Any Piece of Paper And You Can Do a Trick

The secret of the trick is that only one disc at a time is removed, leaving the underneath side of the knife untouched. When both sides of the blade are apparently exposed to show the number of discs remaining, only one is actually shown, as the knife is turned completely around instead of over. This turn is made as a sweeping motion toward the audience. At the finish the same thing occurs, as there are three discs on one side of the blade only, although the spectators are led to believe that there are six altogether, three on each side of the blade, as in the beginning of the demonstration.

IT'S YOUR MOVE

With 15 men still on the board, this game might seem only half begun. But White's strategy can produce a victory in just four more moves. It's White's turn: he's traveling up the board. Can you take over in White's place?

NEW ARRIVAL: Female Maltese Terrier, found on Denman Street.

READY FOR ADOPTION: Scamp is a one-year-old male Golden Spaniel cross. Loves children.

Cross between Cocker and Collie is "Barky"—actually a very quiet little female, four months old. Black and brown.

Rather unusual, very appealing combination of Labrador and Chesapeake. A medium-sized doggie, female, eight months. Name's Tiny.

Four-year-old, black and white cross Spaniel. One bad habit—chases cars. Could you train him? Ask for Skipper.

Curly is 15 months, black, a Setter-Collie in a handsome combination.

Very quiet, shy and retiring is Nipper, a lovely little Border Collie type. Doesn't seem to like men, and needs lots of affection.

CALGARY GETS HELP; ROSS REJOINS CLUB

CALGARY (CP)—Barry Ross, former 21-year-old centre with Calgary Stampede who moved to the Buffalo Bisons of the American Hockey League at the start of this season, has returned to the Western Hockey League club.

Coach Lee Fogelin said Ross was at the Stampeder workout Friday and probably will play against Winnipeg Warriors tonight.

Ross, who said he saw little action while with Buffalo, asked for his release from the AHL club so that he could play with Calgary.

In his first season with Stamps in 1955-56, the former Moose Jaw junior scored 27 goals and collected 32 assists in 64 games.

VIKINGS THUMP TOTEMS

Mount Douglas Clips Dockers in Overtime

Jerry Booth scored only four points at Esquimalt High School Thursday night, but they were enough to give Mount Douglas High its second straight victory—a 38-36 overtime triumph over Esquimalt High Dockers.

In Friday's other exhibition contest, Victoria High Totems were thumped, 75-45, by Victoria College Vikings at Vic High.

Mount Doug was trailing 28-20, in the late stages at Esquimalt but rallied to knot the count, 30-30, at the end of regulation time.

Dockers grabbed a two-point lead in the overtime session before Booth, held scoreless during regulation play, finally found the range to fire the baskets that gave Mount Douglas the win.

Doug Skillings and Ricky Blake each tossed in 10 points to pace the Mount Doug attack while Dave Shaw topped the Dockers with a 12-point performance.

At Vic High, Tom English collected 20 points and Bob Tomlinson contributed 19 to the college total as the Vikings fashioned an easy win over the Totems.

Vikings were in front 36-20 at half time and boosted their margin to 61-37 at the three-quarter mark.

John Devlin was the top Totem sniper with 11 points. In preliminary games, Esquimalt High juniors bested Vic High junior boys, 27-22, at Esquimalt and Victoria College clipped Vic High, 42-22, in a girls' game at Vic High.

Scorers follow:

Practice, says Roy Begg, can come pretty close to making perfect.

In tennis, a perfect game is 300. Roy hasn't reached that peak yet, but he's practicing just the same. In immediate view is the city championships starting next Sunday, and the Strathcona Alleys manager is rolling four practice games a day just to get in shape.

This devotion to duty paid off during the Strathcona senior league Thursday, giving Roy the high series for the week with a 592 (232). He missed his usual stint in the Gibson's senior Tuesday, however, when defending champ Wilbur Webb came in with a 584 (223, 211).

Next to Begg at Strathcona was Norm Gamble with 583 (221, 200), with Al Stokes, 568; Nip Sage, 543 (200), and Bob Bystedt, 533 (207), right behind. In the commercial league, Roy Barnes led with 586 (232). Ian McKeachie was next with 545 (208).

Mary Porter kept up her domination of the Strathcona ladies' league with a 534 (215). Webb's effort at Gibson's was the best of several strong showings. Alex Quinn hit for one of the highest singles in months, 256, and ended with a 578 series. Bud Marty and H. Hazzard both came in with 569; Marty with a 201 single and Hazzard with 209, 200 games.

G. Brown was next with 560, while notable single games went to C. Sapala, 225; W. Smith, 213, and A. Hawkins, 213.

Norm Gamble continued his hot pace in the commercial with 571 (204). Gordie Bamford with 546 (209) was next, followed by Webb, 545; J. Fletcher, 539 (210), and B. Proctor, 538 (202). Ralph Baker with 213 and Red Lawson with 212 had good one-game efforts.

Jack Hobby led the mixed with 572 (217, 210). Len Murrant was next with 556, and Iris Murrant took over for the ladies with 194. Hope Graham led the ladies' league with 487, while Elva Litherland had high single of 203.

In the five-pin world, crew-cut Tony Bishop shaved the pins for a 915 (389) triple at Esquimalt to lead the pack for the week. Next at Esquimalt was Reg Waggoner, 817 (300); J. Gallant, 784; Ben Price, 777; P. Young, 769; Geoff Worrall, 762, and Joan White, 759 (300). Singles went to D. Moseley, 338; S.

Winning Goal Looked Goofy But It Suited Vern Buffey

Regals Edge Cougars On Controversial Call

Brandon 3, Victoria 2
By DENNY BOYD

Here's a brand new way to score goals. It's unorthodox but it's easy.

All you do, see, is fire the puck at the goalie, making sure he catches it. Then when he's holding on to it you bash him over the hands with your stick. Chances are, when he drops the puck, it will go in the net.

Impossible you say? Against the rules?

Well, Norman Johnson, a Brandon Regal forward, did just that at Memorial Arena Friday night and the goal he scored was the winner as the Regals dropped the Victoria Cougars, 3-2.

Actually, it was referee Vern Buffey who opened new vistas for goal-scoring. He was the guy who saw Johnson slash the puck out of Marcel Pelletier's hands and he was the guy who allowed the resultant goal.

It was quite humorous, except for the fact that it was a winning goal.

The clubs were tied at 2-2 late in the third period. Bill Dobbey of the Cougars had just returned to the ice after serving a penalty mysteriously connected by Buffey.

Johnson got a break down the right side and fired a shot that Pelletier caught. Marcel held the puck and dropped his catching hand between his knees to protect the puck while he was standing inside his crease.

But Johnson thundered right into the crease, piled into Pelletier and his stick came into sudden and violent contact with Pelletier's hand. The Cougar goalie went sprawling and the puck went into the net.

Buffey blew his whistle, something a referee never does when a goal is scored. The red light went on.

The Brandon players didn't bother to raise their sticks or whoop or holler because they didn't know if it was a legit goal or not.

But Buffey, after hesitating here and there and pointing his finger at various people, called it a goal.

Just Whistling in Dark

Vehemently questioned by several Cougars, who wanted to know why he blew his whistle, Buffey answered that he had not blown his whistle.

He went to goal judge Al Hardy to double check on the goal and Hardy said, "Yes, the puck went in before you blew your whistle."

So the sum total of it all was that Johnson had scored the goal before the whistle that Buffey claims he never blew but which the goal judge based his decision upon. And that decision was the one upon which Buffey made his final decision.

What about Johnson's being in the crease and slashing Pelletier? Oh, that still hasn't been cleared up.

Pelletier was just one of several indignant Cougars after the game but, as ever, Marcel was the philosopher.

He said, "That man comes right into my crease, slashes me and he gets a goal."

Haley's Hustle Helped Regals

The lead stood up until hustling Len Haley, a real pepper pot all night, shot through the legs of a converging Cougar defenseman and squeezed his shot between Pelletier and the post.

That was at 2:55 and at 10:21 of same period, Johnson's forechecking paid off, combined with some sloppy Cougar clearing. The Cougars were trying to bring the puck out of their own zone, something they are notoriously weak at, when a Victoria player failed to pick up a pass. He kept the puck inside the Victoria zone and Johnson whipped in to snare the puck, shot at Pelletier and then pushed in his own rebound after Pelletier made the initial save.

It was Don Chiupka who put the Cougars back in the game, squaring it in the third period as he got the draw from a face-off in the Brandon end. He slapped the puck to Bill Davidson and then moved in to deflect Davidson's shot past Dechene for the sawoff goal at 6:15.

During a subsequent faceoff in the Cougar zone, Dobbey got the draw and leaned on his opposite number in the prescribed manner that has passed for years. For leaning, he was called for cross-checking.

A great save by Pelletier off Regals' classy, defenseman Ego Chrystall plus some great puck-smothering by Kilburn, killed off the penalty until Dobbey came back.

But just as he came back on the ice, Buffey made that decision. "It has been evident to me that I have not had full support or full consideration from the majority of the league representatives," he said. "It is my understanding that league officials should stand 100 per cent behind their referees and support them at all times."

"I have not found this to be the case in the WHL. I would like to emphasize, however, that I have always found that league secretary Ray Metcalfe of Nelson and vice-president Percy Halliwell of Trail have shown me the utmost in fairness and co-operation."

Robins also said that he was "surprised and disappointed" when his comments on penalties during a Trail-Spokane game were not in a game report that league president Dr. Joseph Vingo had asked him to sign before the report was made out.

He also said that he had been reliably informed that a Spokane hockey official had ordered league executives to see that he did not referee any more games between Trail and Spokane and that he was then told that he would not work Trail-Spokane games in the future.

Wildcats Claw UBC Hoop Birds

VANCOUVER (CP)—Central Washington Wildcats were in complete command in an Evergreen Conference basketball game Friday night in which they defeated the University of British Columbia 72-57. The Wildcats led 38-24 at halftime.

UBC's passing and shooting were off and they seemed to miss the services of Lynn Levy, their ace forward, off with an injured foot.

Central's Joe Kominski was high scorer for the night with 18 points. Outstanding also for Central were Bill Kiehn with 17 points and Bill Cordes, whose rebound play was outstanding, with 13.

Art Shuffles Squad; Canucks Deal Fat Win

Vancouver Canucks shuffled their way out of a four-game losing streak and into a more tenable third-place position in the Western Hockey League's coast division Friday night with a 6-2 victory over Seattle Americans.

In other WHL action, Edmonton Flyers held their prairie division first-place lead at four points over Brandon Regals by whipping Winnipeg Warriors, 7-2.

'CONFIDENCE SHAKEN'

Referees Have Troubles, Too

The average Victoria hockey fan may find it hard to believe today, but referees have their troubles, too.

In Trail, referee Ed Robins has resigned from his Western International Hockey League position Friday, charging that the league officials inferred to him that the more misconduct penalties he called, the better it would be.

Listing several other complaints, Robins said, "my confidence has also been shaken when I have been approached by league officials prior to some games and told that the league needs money. The inference that I took was that the league wanted money from the hockey boys, as each misconduct penalty costs the player $10, which is payable to the league."

Robins is the second WHL referee to resign this season. Referee-in-chief Blair Peters resigned earlier.

CONTRACT BROKEN

Both officials resigned upon being given two weeks' notice, and Robins accused the league executive of breaking its contract with him.

Robins said in a statement that "executive first attempted to renege financially" on his contract, but that this was straightened out to his satisfaction after considerable argument.

"It has been evident to me that I have not had full support or full consideration from the majority of the league representatives," he said. "It is my understanding that league officials should stand 100 per cent behind their referees and support them at all times."

"I have not found this to be the case in the WHL. I would like to emphasize, however, that I have always found that league secretary Ray Metcalfe of Nelson and vice-president Percy Halliwell of Trail have shown me the utmost in fairness and co-operation."

Robins also said that he was "surprised and disappointed" when his comments on penalties during a Trail-Spokane game were not in a game report that league president Dr. Joseph Vingo had asked him to sign before the report was made out.

He also said that he had been reliably informed that a Spokane hockey official had ordered league executives to see that he did not referee any more games between Trail and Spokane and that he was then told that he would not work Trail-Spokane games in the future.

Leonard Harper, 20-year-old soldier with the Queen's Own Rifles, was sentenced to 15 months determinate and six months indeterminate in Appeal Court here Friday on an assault charge.

Harper has been absent without leave from his army duties since last week.

Earlier, Harper was fined $100 in Oak Bay police court for assaulting a woman cab driver, Mrs. Vera Rodgers, in the Gordon Head area Nov. 24.

Friday's hearing was an appeal by the Crown.

SERIOUS VIEW

"We are obliged to take a very serious view of this case," said Mr. Justice Sidney Smith.

Harper, when found, will serve his sentence in the young offenders' unit at Oakalla prison.

The driver for Island Taxi, Mrs. Rodgers, 42, of 29 Paddon, suffered extensive cuts and bruises. According to earlier testimony she drove Harper and another man to Gordon Head camp, but when there Harper said he wanted to come back to the city.

College Players Win UBC Roles

Experience in Victoria College productions over the past year or so has led to UBC Players' Club assignments for at least four Victoria students. In a recent production of Christopher Fry's "Thor With Angels" on UBC campus, Marjorie Gilbert and Catherine Arnold, both of whom played in last year's presentation of Fry's "Lady's Not for Burning" at the College, appeared in leading roles.

Bruce Holker and Lynn Sheldrake, set designing and building team for the Victoria production, acted in similar capacity for "Thor With Angels."

This year at Victoria College, under direction of Flora Nicholson, a particularly ambitious production has gone into rehearsal and will be presented "in the round." Arthur Miller's tragedy, "The Crucible," a play based on the Salem witch hunts of 1692, will have a five-night run, from Feb. 26 to March 2.

Among the large cast will be three actors who gave outstanding performances in the 1956 production. They are George Cummings, president of Victoria College Players' Club, Tony Churchill and John Sparks.

Scramble Looms For House Seats

Interest Hits All-Time High

A scramble for seats in the public galleries is expected at the state opening of the B.C. Legislature by Lieutenant-Governor Frank Ross on Thursday, Feb. 7.

"I have never known the public show so much interest in the opening of the House before," a commissioner at the legislative buildings said.

"We have had a great number of inquiries during the past week."

There are 115 seats in the public galleries in addition to the 350 seats for special guests and the 70 seats allocated among electoral ridings.

The public seats will be issued on a first-come first-served basis and queues are expected on opening day.

TO POSITIONS

The 350 special invitations go to positions rather than people. They have been sent to heads of the church, members of the judiciary, commanders of the armed services, senators, members of parliament, and representatives of the consular service.

Each MLA in the House has the privilege of inviting two personal guests.

One of the factors drawing public interest is the threatened squabble over dismissals of Edgar A. Jamieson, sergeant-at-arms, and W. B. Monteith, law clerk.

Both have said they will attend the House opening in their usual roles, despite the government's desire to remove them.

New men have been appointed to both posts.

MODERATE LENGTH

Premier Bennett has forecast that the coming session will be of "moderate length"—possibly shorter than the 1956 session which lasted from Jan. 17 to March 2.

He says there will be no night sittings if they can be avoided, but most political observers believe the opposition will force him to change his mind by vigorously attacking government policies.

The session will be opened as usual with a speech from the throne delivered by the lieutenant-governor.

Royal Canadian Navy personnel from HMCS Naden will form a royal guard at the opening and music will be provided by the band of HMCS Naden under the direction of Bandmaster CPO C. H. Bateman of Victoria.

The royal guard consists of 100 men selected from various training establishments in Naden. First officer of the guard will be Lieut. E. B. Stone of Edmonton, Alta. The second officer will be Sub-Lieut. John Harwood of Victoria.

10-Day Job To Repair Saanich School

Alterations of Cedar Hill School, damaged by fire from an overheated furnace Friday morning, are expected to take about 10 days.

Meanwhile about 135 grade 3-5 pupils will take classes at Doncaster School, where provisional arrangements for them have been made.

Buildings and lands superintendent R. Hamilton Smith said work is delayed over the weekend because Monday morning is the earliest certain equipment will be available to workmen.

TWO SHIFTS

"We'll go ahead as fast as we can and if two shifts of men will help, we'll put them on," he said.

Damage to hot air ducts, ceiling joists and floor over the furnace resulted when furnace heat set fire to pitch in one of the joists.

Smoke was noticed and 213 children in grades 1-5 were cleared quietly from the building and sent home.

Grades one and two will continue classes in the school annex, others will go to temporary accommodation at Doncaster School.

WAS IT, YOU?

In this column the Times presents letters from and to drivers about careless, discourteous or reckless infractions of driving and pedestrian rules. When you see one, just send in the place, date and time, and what happened. DON'T give the number of the offending vehicle. Only initials of complainants will be used.

TODAY'S BEEFS

It happens every day. You are driving in the left-hand lane. The car ahead of you stops for a red light. Naturally, you stop behind him. The light changes to green. Then—and not until then—the driver signals he is going to make a left turn. He has to wait for oncoming traffic, and you are stuck behind him—often long enough to miss the light. Drivers should signal in time for cars behind to swing into the inside lane.—M.E.

ASK THE TIMES

Q.—How did the name Naden come to be associated with HMCS Naden at Esquimalt?—K.J.

A.—In his history of the naval barracks, F. V. Longstaff says: "The word Naden was used by the Raven Clan of the Haida Indians in connection with the river Naden, the largest on Graham Island, one of the Queen Charlotte Islands. The word Naden comes from the Indian words NE DAN XADA I, meaning Naden River People, a subdivision of the Eceetas. The original Naden was a small wooden schooner with a screw engine, built in 1913 for the Hydrographic Survey. An investigation in 1923 substantiated that the vessel was named after the river. Nowadays, of course, the name applies to the shore establishment at Esquimalt.

Any reader wishing a question answered is invited to send the question along to The Times, addressed to "Ask The Times" Editor. Questions and answers will be published daily.

All questions should deal with matters of fact and be of general interest. The Times does not undertake to solve crossword puzzles.

Shivering Crew Yearns For Peru

Likely candidates for the coldest persons in the Victoria area today are the officers and men of BAP Rimac, 6,800-ton freighter owned by the Peruvian government.

The Rimac is at Esquimalt government dock, undergoing repairs.

She is a 50-year-old ship, built for the tropic trade—and totally lacking in the usual steam heating system found on most freighters.

Only source of warmth aboard is from small kerosene heaters, which are inclined to give off more kerosene odor than heat.

To make matters worse, the Rimac is in chilly B.C., instead of bound for sub-tropical waters, because her refrigeration machinery broke down.

CLEAR BY SUNDAY

She was outboard Thursday night from Vancouver for Puerto Rico when trouble developed, and had to put in to Esquimalt Harbor. Yarrow's Ltd. have the work in hand, and expect to clear the ship by noon Sunday.

BAP Rimac (the "BAP" means "ship of the Peruvian Navy") is manned by officers and men of the regular navy, combines sea-training routines with the humble but useful trade of a tramp steamer.

She was built in 1907 by Blohm & Voss, Hamburg, Germany, as Ss Eten, and has the very modest service speed of 12 knots.

Commanding officer is Captain de Fragata Jose Namihas—who is today confined to his cabin with a severe cold in the head.

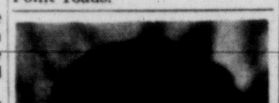

TRAFFIC FINES

In city court Friday: John W. Prout, Portage la Prairie, Man., $35, careless driving Dec. 19 when his car was involved in a collision at Herald and Government, causing $950 damage.

Bernard E. La Pointe, 618 Francis, $35, careless driving when he collided with the rear of another auto slowed in traffic on Douglas at Bay.

William Pinder, 1175 Schram, $35 and licence suspension, careless driving Jan. 4 when his car was struck by another auto as he attempted to cross Douglas from the stop sign at Garbally. He had pleaded not guilty.

In Sooke RCMP court today: Larry Jay, 4337 Columbia, $25 and costs, careless driving Jan. 22 when his car collided with the rear of another vehicle at the junction of Sooke and Otter Point roads.

C. E. "CHUCK" COPELAND

Funeral Service For Well-Known Victoria Sportsman Charles Edward "Chuck" Copeland who died here Thursday, aged 45, will be held at Sands Mortuary Monday at 2:30 p.m. with Rev. Dr. W. W. McPherson officiating. Cremation will follow.

At 3:45 p.m. Thursday a lady proceeded slowly and cautiously eastward on Pandora Avenue to the junction, delaying cars behind her. The other cars stopped for the yellow light, but she drove on directly into the red light and made a left turn down Fort Street. The fact that other cars were held up is immaterial, but certainly her caution was spotty and she could have caused an accident driving into a red light. She drove a fairly late model Hillman, light brown or buff in color.—O. R. N.

Frozen Pipe Epidemic Hits City Households

Plumbers Report Worst Freeze Of Home Water Systems in Years

Hundreds of homes in Greater Victoria have frozen up in the past 48 hours.

DON'T AID CROOKS; KEEP OLD LICENCES

A survey of plumbers today revealed the pipe freeze-up has been the worst in years.

One firm alone reported 75 calls from homeowners unable to thaw water systems.

"We've been rushed off our feet," said one plumber. "This is the worst for years."

Most pipes have simply frozen, but there also have been cases of them actually bursting.

Pipe wrappings of almost any kind will prevent freezing, but in this area, which doesn't anticipate prolonged cold, many pipes are exposed.

Freezing is not limited to older type homes; newer houses are experiencing just as much trouble, one of the city's plumbers said.

Plumbers tell householders to watch the pipes. Fast way of telling if pipes are freezing is simply to feel them. If icy-cold, its time to pour hot water through, the simplest and one of the most effective ways to handle the trouble.

WELDING MACHINES

Some plumbers are using electric welding machines. A wire from the machine is connected to the water main in the street, the other to part of the frozen pipe, and a current is passed along the pipe.

When pipes freeze, shut the water off at the main. If a house is heated by a stove which has a boiler, shut the stove off, otherwise if pipes are frozen the boiler can explode.

Many garages report motorists with car radiators frozen, especially in the suburbs.

One operator said that while most cars had anti-freeze in them, the solutions used were too thin for the present cold spell.

Used car lots contacted said there was no trouble with their vehicles: all had anti-freeze of sufficient strength in radiators to prevent cracking or freezing.

MONDAY MEETINGS

Victoria Gyros: Empress Hotel, noon luncheon, B.C. Electric film "120 Kilowatts Under the Sea" will be shown.

Four-Cent Drop In Coffee Prices

Retail price of most national brand coffees will be reduced four cents a pound in the majority of local stores Monday.

The cut will bring the price of major brands down to $11.6 a pound.

It is reportedly caused by competitive activity at the retail level among chains in the east.

PROMOTION of Capt. Michael W. E. Allen to the rank of major and appointment to commanding officer of "E" Company, Canadian Scottish Regiment (Princess Mary's), is announced by the regiment. Maj. Allen returned last fall from Indo-China where he served with the Canadian delegation to International Supervisory Commission for one year. He had been adjutant of the Scottish before his overseas posting. Maj. Allen joined the unit as a private in 1944 after serving as a cadet at Brentwood College.

$500 in Fines For Three Sailors In Theft Case

Fines totalling $500 were imposed in Oak Bay police court Friday on three youths who admitted being in possession of stolen property.

Fine of $200 or 30 days was the penalty received by Ralph Leroy Overton, HMCS Athabaskan, while Richard John Wilson and Alfred Joseph Coderre, both of HMCS New Glasgow, each were fined $150 or 21 days.

The trio was arrested in a car in the early morning of Jan. 13 on Beach Drive. Two stolen car wheels and tires, a blanket and car radio were found in their possession.

... AND NO ONE WAS KILLED

Driver of the wrecked Hillman in the background above escaped with cuts to his face Friday afternoon when the little car was ripped apart in collision with a truck. Police said it was a miracle Raymond Conway, 722 Cordova Bay Road, was not seriously hurt. Spectacular crash occurred on the Pat Bay Highway near Elk Lake. Truck driver

Sam Schochenmaier, Sidney, was quoted by police as saying his vehicle caught in a rut and swerved into the wrong lane. Part of the car, dragged some 50 feet after the impact, is visible under the truck bumper. (Times Photo by Irving Strickland.)

MONTE ROBERTS

You ask a question, you get an answer. The trouble is, the answer often leads to another question.

Tother day, the question was posed in this space: "How do you feed the ducks in Beacon Hill Park without feeding the seagulls?"

The above question came from a worried constituent, and it worried me even more than it worried the worried constituent.

But just yesterday, another constituent telephoned to supply the answer to the problem.

"Seagulls," said this constituent, "have curved beaks." (See illustration A.)

"Non-seagulls," said the constituent, "do not have curved beaks."

"In other words, non-seagulls, such as ducks, have non-curved beaks." (See illustration B.)

"Therefore," said the constituent, "if you wish to feed non-seagulls and not feed seagulls, what you do is put out very small bits of food; bits of food so small the curved-beaked seagulls cannot gobble the non-curved-beaked, non-seagulls, such as ducks, can shovel them in to their heart's content." (See illustrations A and B, unless you are tired of doing so.)

"I suggest," said the constituent, "small grains and cereals, or bread crumbled into very, VERY tiny pieces."

"Thus," concluded the constituent, "you can feed the non-curved-beaked ducks and NOT feed the curved-beaked seagulls."

Which answers the question handsomely, but leads to another question.

This business of putting out food which curved-beaked seagulls cannot eat.

Is it not going to lead to a case of acute frustration throughout the whole seagull population?

Will it not cause a neurotic condition, a tendency to seek psychiatric care?

And most important of all, will it not bring generations of seagulls yet unborn to the point where they rebel against regimentation, and refuse to be the birds which are followed to Victoria?

Problems, problems, always problems.

Although, come to think of it, we won't NEED birds to follow to Victoria unless something is done about the weather.

European, American Religions Based on Disparate Principles

Sweeping differences between North American and European religions were boiled down to two basic principles by a UBC sociologist lecturing at Victoria College Thursday.

"Religions on this continent are, as a whole, anti-mystical and anti-tragedy," said Dr. K. D. Naegele.

"They are based on the precept that the pain of life can be reduced. As such, they are more active and more concerned with the practical ability to answer the question 'so what?'"

In Europe, religions tend to be mystical, aesthetic and more passive. They centre on accepting the world rather than mastering it, he said.

According to sociological studies, Canadians belong to seven major religious organizations.

Of every 100 Canadians, approximately 43 are Roman Catholic; 20, United; 14, Church of England; five, Presbyterian; three, Baptist; three Lutheran; and one, Jewish.

In general, women are more religious than men and take a greater part in church activities, but no human being is capable of living without some answers to the meaning of life, Dr. Naegele said.

"In some aspects, religion is the reservoir which provides the answers to our problems, but at the same time it raises problems," he said.

"For instance is the Bible to be interpreted literally, or should we believe some contradictions of science?"

Studies show that the more religious a person is, the more intolerant he becomes, Dr. Naegele claimed.

"Even the religiously tolerant are not too keen in fostering or allowing anti-religious movements," he said.

"Variation of religion is permitted, but too much variation challenges the rightness of our belief—and that is uncomfortable."

Dr. Naegele will return to Victoria College next Thursday to give his second lecture on the sociology of religion.

WE WELCOME VISITORS

YOU SAID TO ME—

By ETHEL TULL

A Sunday message of help and comfort for those puzzled, depressed or low in spirit.

You said to me, "Whatever God wants for you, is what we want."

It was my son who said that to me over the long-distance line from London, Ont., to St. Joseph's Hospital, where I am waiting for an operation.

This is being a wonderful experience. Cards and letters flow in every day and I am surrounded by beautiful flowers. In every letter from Ontario, Regina, Kamloops and every part of Victoria, there are the words "we are praying for you," so I am held right up to God on a cloud of prayer. My husband and I decided to make this time of waiting a very happy one and that is just what it is.

I want to thank all my readers who have sent me so many lovely letters and cards and said so many nice things about my writings. I have so enjoyed talking with you each week, I hope to be allowed to do so again.

God is very good and very near. May He bless you all and may you always be just where He wants you to be and doing what He wants you to do.

SATURDAY, JAN. 26, 1957

January is disappearing over Time's horizon and the second month of 1957 is now bustling into the picture. The tempo of entertaining again takes on a sparkling lustre after the slow-paced days that followed the year's end holiday season. . . . Holding an outstanding position on the February social calendar is the eighth annual Symphony Ball at which Victoria's elite will gather to enjoy an evening of dancing and at the same time add their prestige and show their pride in the city's symphony orchestra, that has created an outstanding position for itself in the circle of Canada's musical life.

Symphony Ball

Sponsored by the Women's Committee to the Victoria Symphony Society, the ball will be held next Friday evening in the Crystal Ballroom at the Empress, commencing at 9.30 p.m. Len Acres will play for the dancing and at 11 p.m. a supper will be served. Proceeds will go to the Symphony Society to assist with the work of the orchestra. Dress for the ball will be formal and it is expected that the many exquisite ball gowns of the feminine guests will add brilliance to the picture.

In Music Note at Left—Among those who will act as hostesses at the ball will be the women's committee president, Mrs. Denis Humphries, centre; Mrs. J. N. Edmison, right, the vice-president, and the secretary, Miss Lottie Kaiser. Some of the parties arranged for the ball are to be found in the social columns on Page 19.

Victorian Order of Nurses'

Diamond Jubilee Year

The Earnest Faces of Service—Miss Betty Short, left, and Miss Evelyn Mermod, members of the Victoria branch of the Victorian Order of Nurses, are typical of the hundreds of VON nurses across Canada who serve humanity with kindness, sympathy and the practical knowledge that brings a feeling of safety and assurance to the sick and the aged.

Inauguration of the Diamond Jubilee year of the Victorian Order of Nurses was marked today with the publication of a letter from Prime Minister St. Laurent to the order's president, Mr. E. P. Taylor, Toronto. In this Mr. St. Laurent recalls how his predecessor, Sir Wilfrid Laurier, moved the resolution in support of founding the order at a public meeting in Ottawa 60 years ago.

The VON was founded in 1897 by Ishbell, Marchioness of Aberdeen, wife of Canada's governor-general at that time, Lord Aberdeen. The National Council of Women, which Lady Aberdeen had also founded, impressed upon her the need for a professional nursing service, part time, to patients across Canada. Charter branches were formed in Halifax, Montreal, Ottawa, Toronto and Vancouver, and in the following year a Royal charter was granted to the order by Queen Victoria.

From these relatively small beginnings the VON has grown into a nation-wide nursing service with 117 branches, extending from Corner Brook and St. John's, Nfld., to Nanaimo and Victoria on Vancouver Island. On its staff today are 592 qualified nurses who are prepared to call at the home of any sick person in the community and who work as "everyone's nurse" under the direction of the family physician. In recent years just under 1,000,000 visits have been made annually, of which approximately 165,000 were fully paid, 275,000 part-paid, and over 250,000 given free. The cost of the VON service is met by nursing fees, municipal (including county) grants, private and service club donations, a share in Community Chest funds, and by special appeals where no chest exists.

The continuing interest of the Royal Family in the VON's work is evidenced by the fact that since 1955 Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth, the Queen Mother, has acted as grand president of the order.

During Jubilee Year, the VON will move its headquarters into a home bequeathed by the late Russell Blackburn on Laurier Avenue East, nearly opposite Laurier House. Official opening is expected to take place during the annual meeting, May 8 and 9.

In his letter to Mr. E. P. Taylor, Prime Minister St. Laurent said:

"It is a pleasure for me to pay tribute to the Victorian Order of Nurses for Canada as it enters its Diamond Jubilee Year.

"It was under distinguished auspices indeed that the VON was established in this country 60 years ago, for, at the public meeting which was held in February, 1897, to discuss the founding of the order, the chair was occupied by His Excellency the Governor-General, then Lord Aberdeen, and the unanimous resolution in support of the proposal was moved by Sir Wilfrid Laurier.

"In the six decades which have elapsed since the order received its Royal charter from Her Majesty Queen Victoria, it has made a noteworthy contribution to the health and well-being of Canadians. By the voluntary activities of its members, it has proved its understanding and has shouldered its share of social responsibility toward its fellow-citizens.

"To you, your colleagues and staff throughout Canada, I extend my warm good wishes for the future of the VON."

On a Convention Committee? Here's a Little Suggestion

By PENNY SAVER

You men and women who have found yourself on committees to plan an annual meeting or convention for your club or association of course will have your hands full with arrangements. Many groups, when annual gathering time comes around, like to have name tags for members, so that they are easily identified in the crowd. Tags can be neatly slipped into clear plastic holders with pins on the backs. These holders are pinned to lapel or pocket, and will last for the whole meeting; they're so sturdy. Originally priced at 20 cents each, they are now on at a special clearance price of 10 cents each. Here's a chance to save the organization some money.

Books, books, and more books! Everything from "Flower Making" to "Wedding Etiquette" is included in the wonderful clearance book sale in town. Both these books are just a quarter of their original price. Another book that caught my eye was one featuring seven Noel Coward plays. It was $5.50 and is now $3.98. Novels, historical sketches, and "How to build..." books are available at wonderfully reduced prices. For animal lovers there's a host of books on pets. A favorite is titled "Fox Terriers."

Looking for a dressy suit or afternoon dress for under $20? Regularly priced somewhat higher, these stylish suits and dresses are beautifully fashioned for the most particular tastes. For now and for summer are lightweight navy blue suits, highlighted with white touches at collars and cuffs. There are also attractive prints and casual woools from which to choose.

Double-Ring Ceremony For Victoria Couple

Gowned in a bridal dress of white lace over satin fashioned on princess lines, Miss Doreen Gladys Goudal entered Grace Lutheran Church on the arm of her father last evening for her wedding to Robert Kresier, Rev. Paul Hoch performed the ceremony.

The bride, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Cyril Goudal, 1312 Stanley Avenue, wore with her bouffant-skirted gown an elbow-length veil held to a coronet of iridescent sequins matching the outline of the rounded neckline, also highlighted with sequins and seed pearls. Her bouquet was of red roses.

Matron of honor Mrs. Rosalyn Moir and bridesmaid Miss Pamela Gardner were gown in coral taffeta and powder blue taffeta, respectively, with white feather

HERBS IN THE HOME

You Can Use Garden 'Weeds' In Your Home-Made Soups

By PATRICIA RAE

I'm still thinking about soups and their delightful varieties through the use of herbs.

Last week I wrote about chickweed and nettle soups—have you tried them yet? (Don't tell anyone what you're putting in and just watch their faces when you say they've been helping to tidy up the garden by eating the weeds!)

SORREL SOUP

This was another of our New Zealand favorites. You need about a dozen leaves and, if they're a bit old, cut out the mid-rib. Take about a tablespoon of flour and blend with equal quantity of butter over low heat, stirring continuously. Add finely chopped sorrel leaves. (Also called "sour grass" here.) I used a French "parsimint" grater for this. Stir constantly for about five minutes. Then add three cups of milk or sufficient for your needs. Bring to boil and continue stirring. Season. Then simmer gently over low heat. Just before serving add three or four leaves of lemon-balm and Rosemary (fresh), finely cut. Pour the finished soup into small "croûtons" of fried bread.

Another method a friend of mine used, was to boil a cup of tapioca in one quart of water. Add chopped sorrel and boil for 15 minutes. Pour in one-half pint milk; bring back to the boil, and add a walnut of butter. Season to taste. Serve with cheese crackers.

SORREL ALSO CLEANSSES THE HANDS

When your hands are stained with housework, or after gardening, rub them vigorously with one or two large leaves of sorrel. This cleanses and bleaches them, leaving the palms soft and unstained. Children used to love to watch me cleaning my hands with the "soap plant" (which even "foamed" a little) and were intrigued when I said we could use it for soup as well!

ANOTHER WEED-SOUP—BORAGE

Though I grew it chiefly for its starry blue flowers which candied so prettily and looked so attractive floating as "cordial flowers" on tomato juice, I often used three or four leaves in mixed vegetable soups and when cooking silver-beet or spinach. Borage has a slight flavor of cucumber and when young also is quite a good addition to salads, though you would not think so when examining its rather rough, hairy leaves.

SOUP HERBS

Savory, parsley and chervil are the most usual soup herbs. Bay leaves are sometimes used in tomato soup; also fish chowder. Marjoram and celery go with cabbage soup; savory with pea or bean soup; and chervil with "vegetable creams."

Legislature Opening Time For Finery

By NONA DAMASKE

New York has its Easter parade along Fifth Avenue. . . . Victoria has its very impressive Legislature opening when men and women of importance from many places in British Columbia gather to take part in the colorful ceremonies.

The opening of the Legislature in the Parliament Buildings, the tea reception to follow in the Empress Hotel, and the State hall at Government House these gala events call for Millady to wear her smartest chapeau, her new spring suit or dress with furs and her most elegant formal gown.

In February, the weather can be somewhat inclement but regardless, many attractive spring hats will create splashes of color on the floor of the Legislature where special guests will be seated and in the galleries.

Now that there is a fairly large selection in the shops you will notice that the trend is definitely to smaller and deeper hats. There is a tendency toward hats that settle a little farther off the brow and very often with a tilt to one side.

For the most part straws are used for the spring models but there are hats completely made of flowers, some of silk and a few of wrapped and draped chiffon.

Little furs will occupy an important place with dressy suits and wool dresses. Fur capes, little fur jackets, stoles and scarves of mink, sable and squirrel will protect feminine guests from the harbor breezes.

Return of the short fur cape is a natural fashion development stemming from the slim lines of the spring ready-to-wear collections. Becoming with all dresses featuring lean lines and equally fine with the new tunic silhouette, the cape could be the most important item in fur for the coming small fur season. Little furs carry you through daytime and evening engagements in perfect harmony with suits or evening gowns.

The State hall is a formal function and brings forth jeweled tiaras, long snowy white kid gloves, lovely ball gowns, colorful uniforms and tall coats with decorations.

The groom had Steve Wovchuk as best man and Vernon Goudal, brother of the bride, as usher. Len Bieler proposed the toast to the bride's happiness at a reception party in the Golden Slipper Supper Club. Red roses decorated the bride's table where a three-tier wedding cake topped with white doves and apple blossoms were a part of the arrangement. Allen Carter, pianist, provided music during the reception.

For a honeymoon trip up-Island, the bride donned a black wool sheath dress with black feather hat, pale blue coat and matching blue accessories. Her going-away corsage was a gardenia.

"Rhapsody" . . . an elegant formal in pure silk chiffon. Created by Edith Small this gown features the slim line softened with a draped swag and flowing panels. Aqua, green and white are beautifully blended in this graceful model accented with rhinestone clips.

The attractive ballroom at Government House will be the setting and feminine guests will create the colorful overtones in their stunning gowns imported from Marty of Switzerland, Frederick Stark of London, Cell Chapman of New York and many other world-famous couturiers.

Beautifully dressed women add color and dignity to all occasions.

Our only worry in this case will be the weather man. Keep your fingers crossed!

Watching Birds Feed Outside the Window Fine Pastime for Child Confined to Bed

Have you discovered what fun it is to feed the birds in the winter? Even the most common of little feathered friends are so appreciative of scraps from your kitchen, and you may have the thrill of being host to some of our rarer cold weather birds.

After a heavy fall of snow, when a thick icy crust-forms on the surface, many wild birds may search in vain for enough nourishment to keep alive. This often happens in Victoria in January, when a thaw is followed by a "freeze-up." Sweep a little patch near your back door clear of snow.

Throw out crumbs, rolled oats, tiny scraps of food. This unexpected feast may save not a few feathered friends from perishing from hunger.

But (providing food for the birds does not have to be only an emergency measure when they need human aid. It can become a fascinating hobby for old and young alike. It is a wonderful activity for a child who is confined to bed by a long sickness.

Of Personal Interest

A House Guest

A guest of Mr. and Mrs. S. J. Crawley, 60 Beach Drive, is the Hon. Diana Rodney, who has come from the home of her parents, Lord and Lady Rodney, "Cottlemore Farm," Fort Saskatchewan, Alta., to visit in Victoria. She plans to travel to other parts of Canada before returning to her home in England.

Wedding Guests

Out-of-town guests at the Jagow-Bennett wedding Friday evening in Victoria Truth Centre included the groom's mother, Mrs. Mary Jagow, and brother, Mr. Raymond Jagow, both of Elrose, Sask.; Mr. and Mrs. C. Newell and family, Cobble Hill; Mr. and Mrs. A. Leys, Mr. and Mrs. A. Petersen and Mr. and Mrs. L. Petersen, Lake Cowichan. Rev. and Mrs. Marvin Fast came from Departure Bay, and Rev. Fast performed the wedding ceremony.

Birthday Christening

Little Christina Lee Gibson will be christened on Sunday, her first birthday. Rev. S. J. Wickens will conduct the service in St. Martin's-in-the-Field Church for the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. A. Gibson, 547 David Street. Godparents will be Miss A. Myers, RN, of Gibson's, B.C., and Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Barber, 335 Stewart Avenue. The baby's great-grandmother, Mrs. A. Glass, and her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. O. Myers, will be present at the ceremony. A christening-tea will be held at the home of the parents, following the service.

A boy in the neighborhood who started to feed the birds in his backyard when he was ill, found in bird watching a wonderfully satisfying hobby. His whole family rejoiced in his new interest and co-operated in his plans for a food container and provisions for his bird friends.

A sunflower head fastened in a tree is a wonderful source of food for chickadees. A cocoon can be drained of its milk by boring several holes and then filled with peanut butter, bread crumbs and seeds. Suet may be hung in a loosely crocheted string bag or the kind of a container onions are often sold in. Avoid wire mesh holders as on sub-zero days, a bird's feet, or even his eyelids might be seriously damaged by being stuck to the metal.

It is not hard to make a satisfactory wooden feeding tray. All that is needed is a solid floor, a raised moulding around it, forming a little wall so the food will not blow away, a roof and at least one sidewall to provide protection from snow, rain and wind.

Quite often the food tray is fastened on the outside window ledge, or on a pole or hung by a strong wire from a tree. It is possible to use a double wire with a pulley arrangement, similar to a clothes line. Fasten the far end to a tree and pull it into a window veranda. Then you can fill the tray and, afterwards, pull it out to the tree where the shy birds are more likely to come.

Sometimes a cat pounces on a bird when the bird's attention is focused on eating. A foot deep band of tin around the pole or trunk of the tree prevents a cat from climbing it and a strip of tin at forty-five degree angle around the bottom of the feeding box accomplishes the same purpose. Cats or squirrels cannot reach a container hung from a strong wire.

Crushed egg shells and grit or fine sand are needed by birds to digest their food. They require drinking water too, even in the freezing weather and in the winter often find it hard to find. A wooden mixing bowl is a good water container and you can add hot water to melt its surface as it freezes over.

But there are a great many food scraps, such as potato and apple parings and bacon rind which are often thrown in the garbage which birds would appreciate. Bits of any kind of fat, meat, hard-boiled eggs, or cheese are real delicacies. Pumpkin and squash seeds, rolled oats, broken pieces of pastry, cookies—even dog biscuits provide nourishing morsels. Best luck to you and your bird friends!

BEASTALL ADVISES

Some Necessary Garden Repairs Follow January Snow and Frost

After our January snowfall we usually have a terrific urge to start gardening, and very often the weather until mid-February is the type to encourage outdoor work.

Too often our efforts are mis-spent. We tend to jump the season and the subsequent weather cancels any good we might have accomplished.

There is, however, certain work which can be undertaken to lessen winter damage and clear a few jobs from the list before the spring rush really starts.

The heavy wet snow of last Jack Beastall week has uncovered the weaknesses in things made of lumber. Trellises, archways, sheds and fences, if not already down, are badly askew in many gardens.

The stakes of newly planted trees and shrubs may need re-setting, while those of greater age have fallen.

Repairing these damages is something which can be profitably attended to without delay, and further trouble avoided.

The night frosts we experienced just ahead of the snowfall lifted the soil considerably in some districts. As the snow melts many plants will be found lying on the soil with much of their root systems broken.

EASY WAY POOR

To get these plants re-established in the shortest time should be the gardener's aim, but the simple expedient of pressing them back into wet and sticky soil is not the best treatment.

A better method is to screen a wheelbarrow load of good compost, adding a little sand, and use this to press around the roots after the plants have been set in an upright position.

It could be that you are planning a rock garden as a spring addition to your present garden. If so, be sure to allow plenty of time for the soil and rocks to settle before attempting to plant.

Of course, there are some rock garden plants which will thrive only when their long roots are in the coolness and moisture found beneath or between the rocks. When these are included, they are best set in place as the work progresses.

In any case, the basic work of construction should be started as soon as soil and weather conditions are suitable and carried as far as possible so that the majority of the newly built area has time to settle before spring planting begins.

There is one consolation to working with rock plants. They are usually sold in pots and can be planted all through the season.

OIL BURNER

Because you get better heating at lower cost with a VORTEX

Only a Vortex has this money-saving, whirling, bowl-shaped flame. It blankets the entire fire chamber with rich, radiant heat—sends the heat into your rooms instead of up the chimney. And there's no waiting, no warm-up period—the burner reaches top efficiency in a few seconds. Relax in perfect comfort and make substantial fuel savings with an Iron Fireman Vortex oil burner.

Here's the reason IRON FIREMAN'S VORTEX OIL BURNER has a bowl-shaped circular flame area which blankets every inch of primary heating surface—giving you uniform heat, with less oil burned.

ORDINARY GUN-TYPE BURNERS have a "blowtorch" type of flame that releases heat in the shaft of the furnace, resulting in less efficient firing and much higher fuel bills.

QUIZZING THE GARDENER

Plant Leftover Bulbs For Better 1958 Flowers

By JACK BEASTALL

Q—I was unable to get all my tulip and daffodil bulbs planted before the cold weather and floods of December. Should these be planted this spring or kept until next fall?

A—It is better to plant them at the first opportunity of workable soil. By spring they will be making growth at the expense of the bulbs. If any buds show, remove them to conserve energy, afterwards feeding the bulbs twice with 4-10-10 (potato) fertilizer. This will help rebuild the bulbs for better flowering in 1958.

Q—Will the recent low temperatures and snow spoil the daffodil shoots which were above ground in early January?

A—No; apart from perhaps some browning of the leaf tips caused by the frosts before the snow covered them, no damage will result. In the case of miniature daffodils which were already in flower in sheltered gardens, the flowers and buds would be spoiled.

FIX-IT FORUM

Q—Our pipes to the kitchen sink run from the basement, under an overhang and up to the kitchen. How can I prevent the hot water line from freezing in very cold weather?—P.A.P.

A—If overhang is directly connected to the foundation, as is usually the case, install hook near water pipe at elbow where it runs up to kitchen. On very cold nights, hang from this hook an all-weather extension cord with 40-watt bulb attached. DON'T let bulb or cord touch pipe, and keep bulb away from flooring. Heat from bulb will usually keep air warm enough to prevent pipe freezing.

Q—Can you suggest a good way to hold several pieces of plywood together for multiple sawing? I don't want to mar them with nails or clamp marks.

J.L. A—You might try wrapping the pieces with marking tape. It cuts easily and can be marked in pencil with the pattern you're planning to follow.

HARDWOOD FOR KITCHENS

Hardwood plywood is the favored material for modern kitchen cabinets because of its warm, natural beauty and durability.

WEEK'S WORK

By JACK BEASTALL

According to the type of weather, there will be many jobs which may be done.

Prick out seedlings indoors as soon as they can be handled.

Pot on rooted cuttings as roots reach sides of pots.

Invert pots over tulips which are being forced. Stems will lengthen before blooms open.

Sweet peas sown in pots must be kept cool after germination. Give plenty of light.

Sow a few early peas in plant bands indoors to plant out later.

Sealer Is Important

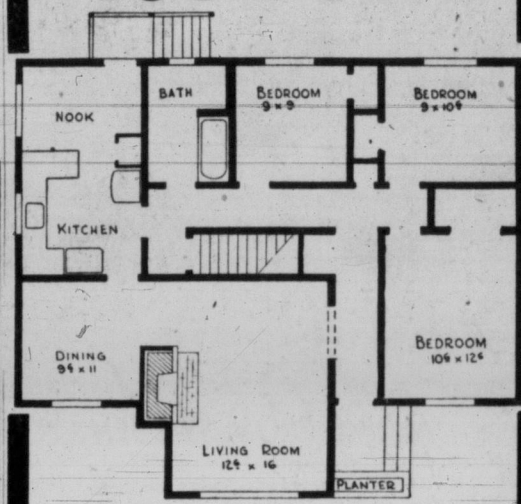

An important step in finishing hardwood plywood is to apply a thin coat of sealer to provide an even foundation for the surface finish.

Plywood Defined

Hardwood plywood, according to a United States Department of Commerce definition, is "wood engineered for beauty, strength and economical application."

When re-potting plants it is advisable to use a pot only one or two sizes larger. The soil in a pot that is too large can get waterlogged and sour.

Inco Metals at work in Canada

The development of stainless steel has produced many remarkable changes in both the appearance and convenience of Canadian homes. Stainless steel sinks made with Inco Nickel are a good example. They not only brighten and beautify the kitchen, they make household tasks far easier. The manufacture of stainless steel sinks, using nickel supplied by Inco, has become a thriving industry in Canada, providing employment for many Canadians.

Inco Nickel for half a million Canadian sinks*

Stainless steel sinks made with INCO NICKEL help provide jobs in Canada

Ten years ago, hardly any homes in Canada had stainless steel sinks. But a few Canadian housewives tried the new sinks and thought they were wonderful—wouldn't stain or chip, were so easy to keep bright and clean, and best of all, glasses and dishes that were accidentally dropped didn't break as easily.

That was the beginning of a new and thriving Canadian industry. Today, most of the new homes being built in Canada have Canadian-made stainless steel sinks. And practically all of these sinks contain Inco Nickel.

Ore from the mines near Sudbury, Ontario, is milled, smelted and refined by Inco here in Canada. Refined nickel is sold to other Canadian companies to make stainless steel. This stainless steel goes to the Canadian firms that make the sinks. And Canadian builders install them in the homes.

These operations—from the time the ore is mined until the finished sink is installed—provide jobs for thousands of Canadian workmen. That's how Inco Nickel helps promote the growth and development of industry in Canada.

Point Ellice Bridge Cost Estimate Pared

May Be $150,000
Less Than Expected

Point Ellice Bridge will cost $100,000 to $150,000 less than was originally anticipated, it was indicated at City Hall.

Ratepayers gave authority for expenditure of $550,000 last April. Now it is even considered possible the bridge bill won't surpass the $400,000 mark.

Council opened tenders Thursday for the decking and approach work, which had been estimated at over $150,000.

Low bidder was Farmer Construction with a bid of $156,444. George Wheaton Ltd., bid $173,115. Commonwealth Construction $167,951, and Burns & Dutton $190,000.

OTHER OUTLAYS

Dominion Bridge of Vancouver was earlier awarded contract for supply and erection of steel for $339,500. B.C. sales tax on the steel will add $5,800. The city will reinforce the steel at a cost of $27,455 and federal tax is set at $1,445. Engineering has been contracted at $27,000 and is being carried out by A. B. Sanderson and Co. Ltd.

Council was told possible deductions and contributions by the federal government, the Canadian National Railway, the Board of Transport and the B.C. Government amount to $244,599.

Cost of repairs to old piers which will be used as the new foundation has been established at $72,000.

The report on the bridge costs was drawn up for council by city engineer James C. Garnett.

Funds for the complete project are already on hand having been collected in recent years from sale of tax-reverted properties and earmarked for the bridge.

A RECORD-SHATTERING CONSTRUCTION YEAR HIGHLIGHTS B.C.'s AMAZING PROGRESS

CAPITAL EXPENDITURES MORE THAN DOUBLE ANY PREVIOUS YEAR IN B.C. ELECTRIC HISTORY

Here's a dramatic illustration of British Columbia's phenomenal growth.

During the past decade, B.C. Electric's construction program has topped previous records again and again as facilities to provide electric, gas, and transit services have been expanded to pace the development of the province.

In 1955... a year of remarkable business activity here... B.C. Electric spent $43 million... by far the greatest sum laid out in capital improvements in any one year since the company was formed in 1897. Yet last year $93 million... more than double this previous record... was required for facilities to ensure there will be plenty of low-cost energy to encourage industrial growth here, to create more jobs and payrolls, to provide better living for more people.

1957 will be a year of intensified effort. A report on B.C. Electric construction plans will be brought to you soon. They call for greater-than-ever investment in British Columbia's bright future.

Laying the 36-mile B.C. Electric Natural Gas pipeline from Huntingdon to the City Gate at the South end of Patullo Bridge.

Transferring the shore end of the submarine cable from cable ship "Ocean Layer" to barge.

SOME OF THE MAJOR ACCOMPLISHMENTS IN 1956:

- ★ Natural Gas was brought to the Lower Mainland.
- ★ 58,500 h.p. of new electric power capacity was placed in service, and substantial progress made on five power developments.
- ★ A submarine cable circuit combining the world's highest capacity, highest voltage and greatest unspliced length linked Vancouver Island to the Mainland power supply.
- ★ The lower Coastal area was linked to the Mainland power supply, providing for industrial expansion at Powell River and throughout the area.
- ★ 16 new substations on the Mainland and on Vancouver Island were placed in service.
- ★ 24 trolley coaches were added to the Mainland urban transit system.
- ★ A new Head Office building was brought to near-completion.

31A POULTRY, HATCHING EGGS, ETC.

Kimberchiks Have a Record for Outstanding Performance

During the 5 years ending with 1955, Kimberchiks entered in the California Official Random Sample Laying Test averaged 250 eggs per bird, based on the number of pullets at one week of age.

91.2% livability to about 18 months, 53.5% income over feed costs.

Although this five-year record indicates very fine breeding, the real test of Kimberchiks is how they perform on commercial poultry farms.

Because of their large early egg size, high production and good livability, Kimberchiks have well been the answer to more profitable operation for you. That's why we suggest you start some Kimberchiks and compare them with your own farm records. You will find that Kimberchiks have previously raised. Collective Bargaining Under Study

OTTAWA (CP)—Cabinet ministers have agreed to investigate whether civil servants should be allowed to bargain collectively with the government, a Canadian Labor Congress official said Friday.

L. E. Wismer, director of the CLC department dealing with government employees, made the statement after a Congress delegation urged collective bargaining rights in a meeting with cabinet members.

Mr. Wismer headed a CLC delegation that renewed demands on behalf of civil service employees, of whom about 50,000 are scattered through various service associations and trade unions affiliated with the Congress.

The suggestion was made at a private meeting with Labor Minister Gregg, Finance Minister Harris and State Secretary Pinard.

Prime Minister St. Laurent said earlier the government has ordered a study of the British system of collective bargaining with government employees but added he was not promising anything.

ISLAND DIGEST Recreation Privileges Asked in Watersheds

CHEMAINUS — Chemainus Rod and Gun Club has endorsed a resolution sponsored by the Cowichan Fish and Game Club asking that supervised recreation be permitted in all B.C. watershed areas.

Club president Don Anderson said the resolution was particularly pertinent here as North Cowichan municipality had applied for a watershed licence on the Holyoak Lake-Mt. Brenton area. He had heard that this area was already closed to anglers and hunters.

Game commission fisheries biologist Dave Hurn of Nanaimo told the meeting there was "no consistency in protection offered water consumers or in the control of water supplies on Vancouver Island."

Regulations covering the various watershed areas were made "at the whim of the body regulating the water."

Several Island communities allow no recreation in their watershed area, others permit partial recreation, and many have no type of restriction or closure whatsoever, he said.

"The argument for prohibition of recreation in watershed areas is not sound," Mr. Hurn said, "and cannot be backed up by fact. There has never been any proven case where the recreational use of a watershed area has resulted in the contamination of a water supply."

SMALL FEE
He said many U.S. communities were able to pay the capital cost of their water systems by charging a small fee for fishing in reservoirs and watersheds.

"I think it is up to us to bring all the facts on this subject before the regulatory bodies concerned," he said.

Two proposed changes in the federal fisheries regulations were approved. Following considerable discussion, members agreed to a plan to charge a $10 licence for non-resident salt water fishermen, and a proposal that would extend the commercial fishing boundary farther away from the mouth of the Chemainus River.

14 Years in Jail Possible Sentence, Juveniles Warned

NANAIMO (CP)—Two 14-year-old boys charged with auto theft were warned in juvenile court Friday that transfer to police court would make them liable to a 14-year jail term.

One of the pair is also charged with criminal negligence.

They were remanded for sentence to Feb. 28.

The charges arose following a breakout from Brannan Lake School on Boxing Day, and a high-speed car chase between Nanaimo and Duncan.

Elk Falls To Dry Up

CAMPBELL RIVER — Vancouver Island's pressing needs for electrical power will doom the famous Elk Falls on Campbell River to extinction for at least two or three years, and perhaps longer.

Until now the B.C. Power Commission has diverted water over the falls during the tourist season, but commission officials have said that until there is no power shortage on Vancouver Island, all water in the system will go through the turbines at the John Hart hydro plant.

ISLAND VIEWPOINT

Action Needed

COURTENAY ARGUS—Idea of a recreation improvement district currently being mooted for this area is worthy of everyone's immediate attention and action.

At present there is no legal means whereby a proper sharing by the district can be assured for recreation services of mutual benefit.

As a result, one municipality has to subsidize a facility used by the entire area, as in the case of the Courtenay swimming pool for one instance.

There is much reason to believe the government is in a mood to accept the growing trends in recreation, and this district stands a good chance of getting in on the ground floor of any benefits from experiments the government may undertake in these new directions.

Fire Districts

SIDNEY REVIEW—This entire area is growing. And one certain sign of development is the activity towards formation of two fire districts, one in North Saanich and the other on Salt Spring Island. Communities can spring into being and develop to a certain point by voluntary donations to pay for fire protection. Beyond that point the donor system falls down and the necessary funds must be raised by direct taxation. This step has already been taken in North Saanich and is in process of coming into being on Salt Spring.

Everyone whose property is protected by Sidney and North Saanich Volunteer Fire Department will hope that these developments will bear early fruit.

Perpetual Timber

COWICHAN LEADER — The bringing down of the second Sloan Report on B.C.'s forest industry is awaited with keen interest.

Sustained yield was the chief justice's preoccupation in the first report. It is safe to say it will be in the second, though now he is faced with blueprinting an orderly transition from present liquidation policies to the type of forestry which must come. To make it clear to the small logger that he, too, must subscribe to a new set of conditions under sustained yield will be a major part of Chief Justice Sloan's task.

Mrs. T. A. Coates Heads Altar Guild

CHEMAINUS — Mrs. T. A. Coates was elected directress of St. Michael and All Angels' Altar Guild at the annual meeting this week.

Other officers are Mrs. F. R. Sadd, assistant directress; Mrs. A. Bird, secretary; Mrs. N. Work, treasurer, and Mrs. J. Sandland, custodian.

Teacher Training At Glad Tidings

Teacher Training Week will get under way at Glad Tidings Tabernacle Monday at 8 p.m. when the opening lecture will be given by assistant minister Paul Hawkes.

The five-day training session will dwell on study of the book "And He Gave Teachers" by D. V. Hurst.

In addition, special features will be given on the subjects, "Sunday School at 9.45 or Thereabouts," "Preparation or Perspiration," "Television Tactics," "Count Your Blessings" and "Eternal Enterprise."

Total cost of the course, including price of the book and registration fee, is $1.50.

Certificates will be issued by the office here, and will be opened two hours later.

Specification may be obtained from the commission's Victoria office: Victoria Building Industries Exchange, 816 Wharf Street; or Building and Construction Industries Exchange, 342 West Pender Street, Vancouver.

Log-Loader Bids Called By BCPC

B.C. Power Commission has called for tenders for construction of a loading-out works for logs at Buttle Lake.

The bids will be accepted up to noon on Feb. 5 at the commission's office here, and will be opened two hours later.

There are more than 1,000 islands scattered about in Lake Nipigon, Ontario.

Warm Air Near

Cold Spell To End Monday

A break in the cold spell that has held Vancouver Island and the lower mainland in a paralyzing grip for the last week is expected Monday.

The cold air mass covering B.C. is moving gradually east, and mild Pacific air is edging toward the coast with above-freezing temperatures.

Weatherman William Mackie said maximum and minimum temperatures will rise gradually with the onset of the mild air, which caused high cloud over the city today.

20 TONIGHT
"Our overnight minimum was 17.7 degrees, and tonight we are predicting 20 degrees," he said. "Friday's maximum temperature was 24 degrees, but we are expecting a maximum of 30 on Sunday."

Temperature at noon today was 25 degrees.

Children enjoying one of the best sessions of out-door skating here will be happy when warm weather comes, but to most of Victoria it will be a blessing.

WEARY

Plumbers have been working steadily at thawing pipes since the vicious wind of Friday morning (see page 15), and taxi drivers and delivery men are weary of fighting ice and snow on sidewalks.

Weekly report of the National Employment Service showed 700 more persons out of work now than at the same time last year, almost wholly because of adverse working conditions outdoors.

There are 4,058 persons out of work, said C. A. Mudge, manager of the local office, an increase of 219 in the past week.

ICEBREAKER

Island Comet of the Island Tug & Barge Co. fleet was used as an icebreaker this morning in the Inner Harbor between Johnson Street and Point Ellice bridges.

Boats at McKay-Cormack Ltd. and Fishermen's Wharf were reported frozen into their berths, and Gorge Boat House reported ice between the shore and dock.

'Cat's Meow' Not Worth $20,000 Not With Cat's Meowing

GLENDORA, Calif. (UP)—Occupants of a new $20,000 home — labeled as the "Cat's Meow"—today vowed to move out unless a cat which has been haunting the dwelling for the past 20 days with around-the-clock walls is found "dead or alive."

The cat is believed to be trapped somewhere within the walls of the new home.

"We can't stand it any longer," said Vincent Cartia, "the meowing is driving us crazy."

PRAYER FOR TODAY

Thou, my Lord, silent before thy translators like a sheep that is dumb before its shearer, I would learn of thee. Let my honest and open life still the wagging tongue. Help me extract from every knock a boost and to rejoice in my critics as the unpaid guardians of my soul; in Christ's name. Amen.

Hungary Holds Britons as Spies

VIENNA (Reuters)—Four British students missing in Hungary since Jan. 14 will be tried by Hungarian court on espionage charges a communique issued in Budapest today said.

The four were arrested Jan. 17.

The four are Judith Cripps, 19, granddaughter of Sir Stafford Cripps; Roger Cooper, 21, nephew of poet Robert Graves; Christopher Lord, 22, and his brother, Basil Lord, 23.

They entered Hungary Jan. 14 with a transit visa permitting them 24 hours to drive through the country to Austria.

The communique said the four had false documents which were issued "in the name of the Soviet kommandatura in Budapest on Jan. 12 1956."

It said the four also were in possession of letters from Hungarian students who had fled to Britain.

"They had the task of obtaining details about the Soviet and Hungarian armies and about political and economic conditions in Hungary," the communique said.

A statement from the ministry of interior added that Cooper and Christopher Lord were in Hungary last November "without valid passports and both took part in activities of counter-revolutionary groups."

Upsets Mark Cup Soccer

LONDON (Reuters)—Newcastle United and Wolverhampton Wanderers, two of the most formidable clubs in English soccer, went down to defeat against third division clubs in the fourth round of Football Association Cup competition today.

Newcastle, three-times winner of the cup in the last five seasons, lost an away game to Millwall 2-1.

But more astonishing was the 1-0 home defeat of Wolverhampton, strong contender in the first division this year, to Bournemouth. The Wolves are considered nearly unbeatable at home even against first division clubs.

Two other first division teams lost to second division clubs, Cardiff City bowing 1-0 at home to Barnsley while Portsmouth, also at home, was beaten 3-1 by Nottingham Forest.

EISENHOWER-MACMILLAN PARLEY IN MARCH?

New U.K.-U.S. Move To Patch Up Rift

Firm Policy Front Needed Against Russ

LONDON (UP)—Plans for a top-level meeting between President Eisenhower and Prime Minister Harold Macmillan are under way, diplomatic sources said here today.

The meeting will probably take place in March.

Present plans are to prepare the way for conference well in advance, by creating an improved atmosphere and by sorting out problems which require a priority settlement.

The meeting would be the first get-together between the president and a British prime minister since the ex-premier, Sir Anthony Eden, talked to Eisenhower a year ago in Washington.

Some British diplomats are advising against an immediate Macmillan-Eisenhower meeting, claiming it could give the impression that Britain's prime minister is rushing to Washington as "suppliant."

But top-bracket government quarters are anxious that the heart-to-heart talk should take place as soon as is feasible.

U.S. is expected to put out the first feelers on the projected conference.

Late in the spring or in the early summer, Macmillan expects to meet the Commonwealth prime ministers, probably in London for talks on mending recent rifts and strengthening their bonds.

Aim of British leaders appears to be to reshape the Anglo-American alliance and then turn to the international scene where the Anglo-American stand needs urgent clarification and some vital adjustments.

British leaders feel that there is no firm Western policy front at present toward Russia.

The absence of such a joint Western Mid-East policy is held to necessitate a clear definition of tasks, so that each of the Big Powers knows where it stands and where it is supposed to go.

Nationalist China Imposes Trade Ban

TAIPEI, Formosa (Reuters)—Nationalist China has decided to impose a ban on strategic materials to Britain and other countries having political or trade relations with Communist China, reliable sources reported today.

The ban would also affect Egypt, Malaya, Indonesia, Burma, Hong Kong, Singapore and possibly Japan.

The Moscow commentator said, "nobody and nothing threatens Britain's security at the present time. It would be ridiculous and unnatural to put one's own country in mortal danger."

A broadcast in English said U.S. governing circles have decided "they can play around unceremoniously with the destinies of nations and to further their plans they are ready to expose these nations to a lot of danger."

Sandys to Visit Ottawa Next Week

OTTAWA (UP)—Britain's defence minister, Duncan Sandys, will come to Canada next week to confer with Defence Minister Ralph Campney, Defence Production Minister C. D. Howe and the chiefs of Canada's armed services.

A defence official said Sandys probably would discuss closer integration of British and Canadian forces on North Atlantic Treaty service in Europe.

Northwest Hit by Sharp Earth Tremors

Residents of Fairfield and other low-lying, land-filled, marshy areas felt the brunt of earthquake tremors which rattled through the Pacific Northwest between 5.12 and 5.16 p.m. Friday.

There was no serious damage reported in the affected area bounded by Victoria, Gulf Islands, Lower Mainland, Everett, Seattle and Olympia, the centre estimated at about Everett.

Shock cracked a wall in an old building at Anacortes, the only damage reported, although houses trembled, lights swayed, plaster cracked and dishes rattled in many areas.

Dominion Astrophysical Observatory director Dr. R. M. Petrie said it could be considered only a mild shock and that observatory staff did not feel it because of the rocky nature of the terrain.

Some residents of Victoria felt a distinct jolting shock lasting several seconds, diminishing to a light vibration which lasted about a minute.

Geologists at the University of Washington, in Seattle, said their seismograph indicated the quake centre about 25 miles north, or Everett.

Kashmir Seizure Sparks Rioting

KARACHI, Pakistan (Reuters)—Steel-helmeted police clashed with angry crowds in Pakistani cities today as protests mounted against the integration of Kashmir into India.

Police hurled tear-gas bombs into a procession of several thousand outside the office of the Indian deputy high commissioner in Hyderabad, West Pakistan.

Reports reaching here said several police were injured in the rioting.

TORONTO (CP)—The Star says the family of William MacEwen, wealthy reeve of Maxville, Ont., near Cornwall received a telephone call Friday night from a man who said he had kidnapped the reeve and demanded ransom for his return.

'FEEL SAFER' REMARK STIRS TEMPEST IN BRITAIN

'Go It Alone' Dulles 'Roaming Among Prickly Pears' Says Press

LONDON (UP)—British newspapers were up in arms today over U.S. Secretary of State Dulles' remark in a Senate committee hearing that he would feel safer in the Middle East without British or French soldiers at his side.

"Mr. (Go It Alone) Dulles insulted Britain again," said The Daily Sketch.

Many British newspapers carried a paraphrase of Dulles' remark as the sub-headline.

The influential Manchester Guardian said Dulles "is roaming again among the prickly pears of the English language."

In its editorial The Guardian said Dulles did not mean what he said.

The Communist Daily Worker also exploited Dulles' remark. "Dulles takes new swipe at Britain," its headline read.

But the Times of London buried the remark in a story from Washington headlined "New Attack on Mr. Dulles," which spoke of a direct Democratic attempt to force his resignation.

The Daily Express said Dulles was speaking "off the cuff" and said he is "a man to whom the right words do not come easily."

U.S. VIEWPOINT WORRIES BRITONS, SAYS SANDYS

NEW YORK (AP)—Questioned on his arrival today from London about State Secretary Dulles' remarks, British Defence Minister Duncan Sandys replied: "I'd like to say quite frankly that in Britain the recent American attitude towards us did come as a great shock. . . . Despite everything I am quite sure the friendship between our two countries remains unshaken, and I thank God for that, since on it depends the peace of the world."

said Dulles did not mean what he said.

not the most diplomatic, the Express said: "He is engaged in trying to improvise in haste an American policy for the Middle East where no American policy existed before. Before Mr. Dulles has finished with his task he may well feel 'a lot safer' to have the active support of Britain and France."

In its editorial, the Manchester Guardian said Dulles "has not yet matched in quality Defence Secretary Charles E. Wilson whose infelicities—dividing the unemployed into 'bird dogs' and 'kennel fed dogs' for instance—are few, but roses."

"But Mr. Dulles may catch up by sheer accumulation."

They allowed her to meet with newsmen in the immigration office and then she returned to Detroit.

Dame MacLeod is currently on a tour of the United States and plans to visit Toronto and Montreal later.

She told reporters she had forgotten to bring even a passport.

Sugar Prices Under Study

Trade Division to Submit Report To Justice Minister Garson Shortly

By VICTOR J. MACKIE, Times Ottawa Correspondent.

OTTAWA—The combines division of the Justice Department has been maintaining surveillance over the sugar industry of western Canada during the past two years and it is understood the restrictive trade practices commission has prepared a report to be submitted to Hon. Stuart Garson, minister of justice.

In recent weeks there has been a rise in the world price of raw sugar. This has been followed by increases in the prices of refined sugar purchased by the consumer.

The price increases have resulted in renewed demands from parliamentarians and other sources, directed at the federal justice department, to make an investigation of the sugar industry. It is expected the report of the commission will warn against the dangers of mergers and deal with price increases as well as with other aspects of the sugar industry, insofar as they come within the scope of the Combines Investigation Act.

WELL-KEPT SECRET

Conclusions of the restrictive trade have been kept a closely guarded secret. The commission reports directly to the minister.

This week a Winnipeg candy manufacturer urged the federal government to make an investigation into the activities of Canadian sugar manufacturers as a result of a series of increases which have boosted sugar prices by more than three cents a pound since November. Mr. Garson informed the Commons last week that the combines division had checked into the recent price increases. The investigators had reached the conclusion that the present increases in themselves had no significance insofar as the government's anti-combines legislation was concerned. World raw prices had advanced more rapidly and to a greater degree than had the selling prices charged by refiners.

COLDWELL INVESTIGATION

M. J. Coldwell, national CCF leader on July 13, 1955, requested an investigation into the sugar industry. He said that reports at that time indicated that the Manitoba Sugar Company would be controlled by the British Columbia Sugar Refining Company through the purchase of shares. He urged Mr. Garson to consider an investigation by the anti-combines division.

Mr. Garson replied that the combines branch maintained general surveillance over the acquisition by one company of another, where there were few companies in an industry, or where the proportion of trade accounted for by the parties to the acquisition is large. In accordance with that practice the combines branch has been carrying out informal inquiries to ascertain whether the transaction may raise a question under the Combines Investigation Act.

Danger Warning Up As Economic Boom Rolls On

By WALTER BEEDE Jr.

NEW YORK (AP)—The business boom was still rolling this week but signposts warned of danger.

Two big questions loomed: Would consumers keep on spending as freely? And would business curtail its spending?

Most auto makers were holding down output. Only one—Ford—scheduled overtime.

Manufacturers' inventories climbed faster than sales. There were signs of glut in the market for appliances and television sets.

A downward trend in orders for machine tools pointed to a slower tempo of industrial expansion. A Dun and Bradstreet survey found business executives looking for slimmer profits despite increased sales. The stock market showed no inclination to rally.

Against this background, costs continued to rise.

COST OF LIVING UP

The government reported the cost of living reached a record last month. Increased housing costs were held responsible.

Oil and gasoline increases touched off fireworks in Congress. Senate investigations were shaping up.

Behind higher prices for heating fuel and gasoline lay an increase in the price of crude.

SENATE INVESTIGATIONS

Also slated for were increased prices of steel, building materials and newsprint.

Rising price trends figured prominently in President Eisenhower's message to Congress.

Businessmen noted one significant omission: The president made no request for powers to invoke installment credit controls.

Also meaningful was the president's assurance that the government would do "every single thing" necessary to prevent depression.

Briefly over the business scene: Gross weekly pay of U.S. factory workers reached a high last month. Average earnings: $84 a week. . . Buyers at wholesale furniture markets see prices going up 3 to 5 per cent. . . Col. Robert H. Morse, slated to resign next month as chairman of the Fairbanks Morse and Co., has named his son, Robert H. Morse Jr., to succeed him.

British Urge U.S. Speed Oil Shipments

WASHINGTON (AP)—Britain is reported urging the United States to step up shipment of oil to Europe to replace fuel blocked by the Middle East crisis.

British officials are said to be unhappy about the amount of American oil going to Europe.

They are reported to feel the amount is lower than they had expected or hoped for.

Shipments of oil from the United States and South American fields to Europe were increased after the flow of Middle East oil was interrupted by the Suez Canal closure last fall and sabotage of the Syrian oil pipeline.

Emergency shipments of U.S. oil of all types to Western Europe averaged 275,000 barrels daily during the week ended Jan. 16.

Crude oil shipments, however, averaged only 72,000 barrels a day and were the lowest for any week since Nov. 8.

The emergency program has an announced goal of movement of 400,000 to 500,000 barrels of U.S. crude daily.

B.C. Coal Output Up; Island Shows '56 Decrease

VANCOUVER (CP)—British Columbia's coal output in 1956 was up about six per cent from 1955, but all districts except one showed lower production.

The total 1956 output from B.C. collieries was 1,448,824 short tons, up some 78,000 tons from the 1955 production of 1,370,73 tons.

Vancouver Island's output was down to 197,535 tons from 209,783.

Easing of Tax Load Urged on Government

OTTAWA (CP)—Finance Minister Harris, now preparing his 1957-58 budget, was urged Friday to provide more generous tax deductions for medical expenses and to ease the tax load on working couples.

These were included among more than 25 tax changes proposed by the Canadian Institute of Chartered Accountants and the Canadian Bar Association in their annual joint submission to the minister.

Some were of a technical nature, aimed at simplifying the tax structure. Others touched on estates of farmers and fishermen and charitable donations by industries. The net effect of most of them would be to ease the taxpayers' burden.

Tax allowances for medical expenses are currently too limited in scope and fall short of

U.K. Plans 1,000-MPH Jetliner

LONDON (Reuters)—British Friday night announced plans for a supersonic jet airliner in the continuing battle with the United States for commercial air supremacy.

The supply ministry said it has embarked on a research project for developing the plane in conjunction with Britain's aircraft industry and airline corporations.

Plans call for production of the plane by early 1960s.

Some experts say the target is an aircraft that will cruise at about 1,000 miles an hour linking London and New York in under four hours.

Overseas Wheat Shipments Hit Year's Low Level

WINNIPEG (CP)—Canadian visible wheat supplies at the week ending Jan. 16 remained relatively steady and closed at 357,200,000 bushels compared with a total of 357,600,000 bushels a week earlier.

The board of grain commissioners also reported primary marketings dropped sharply to 3,400,000 bushels compared with 6,000,000 the previous week.

Overseas wheat shipments hit their lowest level of the current crop year with only 1,900,000 clear Canadian seaboard points compared with 3,700,000 bushels the previous week and 4,300,000 during the same week last year. Domestic shipments improved from 300,000 bushels to 1,900,000.

Country shipments of grain continued to reflect the impact of the rail strike with rail loadings amounting to only 5,400,000 bushels of the five principal grains combined.

Lakehead terminal receipts were also light at 4,600,000 bushels, but still well above the outward rail movement and Fort William-Port Arthur terminal stocks advanced to 58,000,000 bushels compared to 54,700,000 bushels in stock at the close of business Jan. 9 and 47,800,000 bushels held at these elevators at the close of business Jan. 18, 1956.

Copper Mountain Mine Faces March Closure

PRINCETON (CP)—Falling copper prices will force closure of the once-rich Copper Mountain mine about March 31, an official of the Granby Consolidated Mining, Smelting and Power Company said Friday.

The mine, a familiar landmark off the Hope-Princeton Highway 160 miles east of Vancouver, employs 530 men.

Jack Ross, Granby general manager, said operations would cease within the next three months unless the copper market improves.

"The only thing that would change the picture is if copper prices went from 33 cents a pound to 40 or 45 cents within the next few weeks," he said.

DEVON PALMER LEADING OIL Canadian Market Hit By Lowering Tones

By RON ANDREWS Canadian Press Staff Writer

Canadian stock market prices milled about inconclusively this week with few individual highlights.

There was a downward movement on the week, but only because of lowering tones. The indices slipped a bit each day at both Toronto and Montreal and the effect was the sharpest index losses of the new year.

The usual technical factors which influenced the markets during the previous three weeks, failed to stir enthusiasm.

As a result of traders' reluctance to set any trend, volumes were the lightest of the year.

At Toronto, total volume was 29,543,000 shares compared with 31,823,000 the previous week.

Pitch — ore uranium was the busiest stock with a turnover of 2,738,400. It closed the week unchanged at 10 cents. El Sold Gold took a four-cent loss while turning over 2,228,869 shares.

Devon-Palmer was the leading western oil.

Although losses outnumbered gains two-to-one on the Toronto Exchange, there was only a handful of major changes.

Federal Chamber Head Addresses Nanaimo Group

Mayor Pete Matfee of Nanaimo conducted the installation.

Mr. Dupuis said it was the mission of the Chamber of Commerce to sell Canadians on the merits of the competitive free enterprise system, and to encourage foreign investment in Canada and a program of selective immigration. He invited the chamber to make an intensive study of the Gordon report, and urged all Canadians to do their utmost to boost output per man-hour.

Hon. Earle C. Westwood, provincial minister of trade and industry who is convalescing from a recent operation, was unable to be present as scheduled.

BCE Gas-Powered Plant To Cost $11 Million

VANCOUVER (CP)—The B.C. Electric Co. says it will start construction immediately of an $11,000,000 thermal-electric plant, powered by natural gas, at Port Mann.

A B.C. Electric spokesman said the plant will generate enough power to supply 20,000 Vancouver homes at peak load.

When completed in 1958, it will have an output of 134,000 horsepower and will be one of the largest of its type in the world using natural gas.

Canadian Oil Firm Invades Alaska Field

VANCOUVER (CP)—Reports here say a Canadian-owned and financed company is moving into Alaska and the Yukon with a $15,000,000 program to refine and distribute petroleum products.

The report says Vancouver would become a major supply point for the venture, announced Friday by Alaska-Yukon Refiners and Distributors Ltd. of Edmonton.

"The venture is unique in that Canadian oil interests are moving into U.S. territory in a broad field," the report says.

The program included: A $6,000,000 refinery at Haines near the tip of the Alaska Peninsula; the refinery to receive crude oil by deep-sea tanker from the western terminus of the Trans-

Mountain oil pipe line near Vancouver; Two "small inch" pipelines, one linking Haines with Alaska Junction in the Yukon and with the Canol line built during the Second World War and other connecting lines; and a major supply point for the venture, announced Friday by Alaska-Yukon Refiners and Distributors Ltd. of Edmonton.

Construction of deep-water facilities at Haines making it a year-round, ice-free port; Distribution of petroleum products throughout Alaska and the Yukon.

The report says marketing in Alaska and the Yukon will be undertaken by the Royalite Oil Co., which recently announced a $50,000,000 program for development of the Athabasca tar sands.

ANIMALS AROUND US

Crayfish Tasty Easy to Catch

By DR. G. CLIFFORD CARL

Crayfish, crawfish or crawdad, call them what you wish, these creatures are one of the best known members of the great arthropod group. The name is said to come from the French word "ecrevasse" based on their habit of living in rock crevices. Youngsters like them because they are easy to catch with a piece of bacon rind on a string; oldsters like them because they are good to eat or can be used for fish bait.

Modeled somewhat along the lines of a lobster, crayfish have a more or less typical crustacean design.

The conspicuous appendages are the pincers or claws, especially large and heavy in the old males. These efficient tools command respect for they can inflict a painful pinch to the unwary. The other four pairs of walking legs enable the animal to walk or climb over the bottom in any direction but if it is really in a hurry, as when startled, the flexible abdomen and tail fan are flicked suddenly forward which drives the animal backward in a quick dart.

Crayfish are nocturnal. The best way to hunt them is by night when they can be easily captured by placing a net behind them and poking them in front with a stick. They usually react by dashing backward into the bottom of the net. By day they hide beneath boulders, rocks and stones from which retreat they can be tempted by meat or a piece of string. On muddy bottoms, such as in Shawnigan Lake, they hide beneath the silt and other accumulated trash.

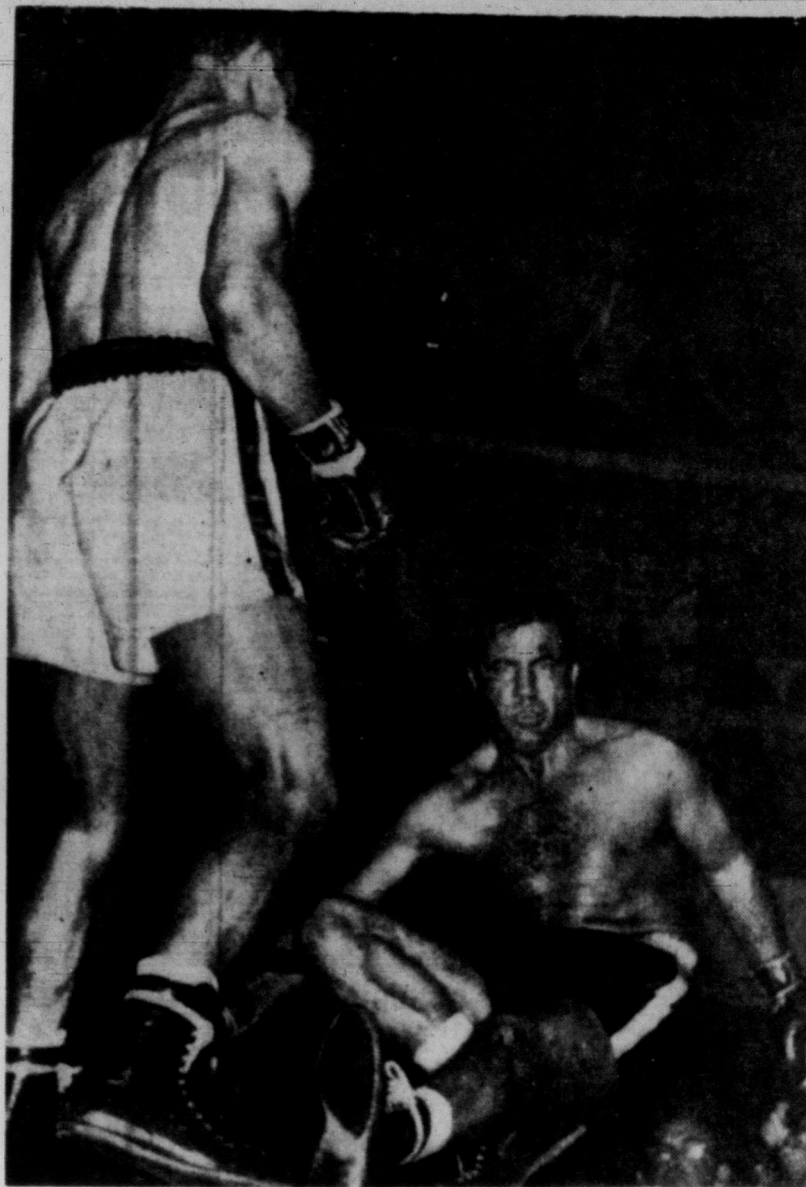

Crayfish range in size from midgits less than half an inch long to grand-daddies that may stretch eight inches from tip to tip. As with other crustaceans they shed the shell at intervals, growing a new and larger one each time, and this process poses a problem.

Nearly all crayfishes carry a load of "free-riders" on the inside surfaces of the pincers. These are worms which attach themselves to the shell of the host by means of suckers and presumably feed on scraps resulting from the crayfish's meals. The puzzle is, what happens to the dependent worms when their host casts off his old shell? Do they remain on the empty skin until hunger drives them off or do they immediately transfer to the host's new coat of armour before it is hard? Perhaps someone with both curiosity and patience will give the answer some day.

Crayfish have been the subject of many experiments and one of these is now almost a classic. Some time ago it was discovered that crayfish and similar crustaceans depend for their sense of equilibrium upon sand grains which occupy a sensory pit at the base of the feelers. When the animal is in the normal position the grains of sand rest on the floor of the pit and their pressure at that point tells the animal it is right side up. Tilting the body causes the sand grains to shift; the crustacean then changes its angle to restore the correct stimulus thus righting itself again. When the crustacean sheds its shell the old sense organ is lost and the new one has to be supplied with sand grains before it functions properly. In the experiment under discussion the investigator confined a newly-moulted crayfish in a tank containing no grains of sand but iron filings, some of which soon found their way into the sense organ. Then when a magnet was placed over the crayfish it immediately flopped over on its back because the sensory pit signalled it to do so!

If you are interested you might try another type of experiment with crayfish. Grasp a crayfish behind the head well clear of the pincers and stand the animal on its "nose" with the two pincers folded back. The nose (i.e., the spine between the eyes) and the two pincers form a triangular support; if the animal is held in this position for a few seconds until its struggles cease it will remain at this ludicrous angle with its tail pointing up in the air for several minutes as if hypnotized. There seems to be no logical explanation for this strange behavior; perhaps the animal is smart in acting so resignedly in what must be the most humiliating position!

CALGARY GETS HELP; ROSS REJOINS CLUB

CALGARY (CP)—Barry Ross, former 21-year-old centre with Calgary Stampede who moved to the Buffalo Bisons of the American Hockey League at the start of this season, has returned to the Western Hockey League club.

Coach Lee Fogelin said Ross was at the Stampeder workout Friday and probably will play against Winnipeg Warriors tonight.

Ross, who said he saw little action while with Buffalo, asked for his release from the AHL club so that he could play with Calgary.

VIKINGS THUMP TOTEMS

Mount Douglas Clips Dockers in Overtime

Jerry Booth scored only four points at Esquimalt High School Thursday night, but they were enough to give Mount Douglas High its second straight victory—a 35-36 overtime triumph over Esquimalt High Dockers.

In Friday's other exhibition contest, Victoria High Totems were thumped, 75-45, by Victoria College Vikings at Vic High.

Mount Douglas was trailing, 26-20, in the late stages at Esquimalt but rallied to knot the count, 30-30, at the end of regulation time.

Dockers grabbed a two-point lead in the overtime session before Booth, held scoreless during regulation play, finally found the range to fire the baskets that gave Mount Douglas the win.

Doug Skillings and Ricky Blake each tossed in 10 points to pace the Mount Doug attack while Dave Shaw topped the Dockers with a 12-point performance.

At Vic High, Tom English collected 20 points and Bob Tomlinson contributed 19 to the college total as the Vikings fashioned an easy win over the Totems.

Vikings were in front 36-20 at half time and boosted their margin to 61-37 at the three-quarter mark.

Practice, says Roy Beggs, can come pretty close to making perfect.

In tennis, a perfect game is 300. Roy hasn't reached that peak yet, but he's practicing just the same. In immediate view is the city championships starting next Sunday, and the Strathcona Alleys manager is rolling four practice games a day just to get in shape.

This devotion to duty paid off during the Strathcona senior league Thursday, giving Roy the high series for the week with a 592 (232). He missed his usual stint in the Gibson's senior Tuesday, however, where defending champ Wilbur Webb came in with a 584 (223, 211).

Next to Beggs at Strathcona was Norm Gamble with 583 (221, 200), with Al Stokes, 568; Nip Sage, 543 (200), and Bob Bystedt, 533 (207), right behind. In the commercial league, Roy Barnes led with 586 (232). Ian McKeachie was next with 545 (208).

Mary Porter kept up her domination of the Strathcona ladies' league with a 534 (215). Webb's effort at Gibson's was the best of several strong showings. Alex Quinn hit for one of the highest singles in months, 256, and ended with a 578 series. Bud Marty and H. Hazzard both came in with 569; Marty with a 201 single and Hazzard with 209, 200 games.

G. Brown was next with 560, while notable single games went to C. Sapala, 225; W. Smith, 213, and A. Hawkins, 213.

Winning Goal Looked Goofy But It Suited Vern Buffey

Regals Edge Cougars On Controversial Call

Brandon 3, Victoria 2
By DENNY BOYD

Here's a brand new way to score goals. It's unorthodox but it's easy.

All you do, see, is fire the puck at the goalie, making sure he catches it. Then when he's holding on to it you bash him over the hands with your stick. Chances are, when he drops the puck, it will go in the net.

Impossible you say? Against the rules? Well, Norman Johnson, a Brandon Regal forward, did just that at Memorial Arena Friday night and the goal he scored was the winner as the Regals dropped the Victoria Cougars, 3-2.

Actually, it was referee Vern Buffey who opened new vistas for goal-scorers. He was the guy who saw Johnson slash the puck out of Marcel Pelletier's hands and he was the guy who allowed the resultant goal.

It was quite humorous, except for the fact that it was a winning goal. The clubs were tied at 2-2 late in the third period. Bill Dobbey of the Cougars had just returned to the ice after serving a penalty mysteriously concocted by Buffey.

Johnson got a break down the right side and fired a shot that Pelletier caught. Marcel held the puck and dropped his knees to protect the puck while he was standing inside his crease. But Johnson thundered right into the crease, piled into Pelletier and his stick came into sudden and violent contact with Pelletier's hand. The Cougar goalie went sprawling and the puck went into the net.

Buffey blew his whistle, something a referee never does when a goal is scored. The red light went on.

The Brandon players didn't bother to raise their sticks or whoop or holler because they didn't know if it was a legit goal or not. But Buffey, after hesitating here and there, pointing his finger at various people, called it a goal.

Just Whistling in Dark

Vehemently questioned by several Cougars, who wanted to know why he blew his whistle, Buffey answered that he had not blown his whistle.

He went to goal judge Al Hardy to double check on the goal and Hardy said, "Yes, the puck went in before you blew your whistle."

So the sum total of it all was that Johnson had scored the goal before the whistle that Buffey claims he never blew but which the goal judge based his decision upon. And that decision was the one upon which Buffey made his final decision.

What about Johnson's being in the crease and slashing Pelletier? Oh, that still hasn't been cleared up.

Pelletier was just one of several indignant Cougars after the game but, as ever, Marcel was the philosopher.

He said, "That man comes right into my crease, slashes me and he gets a goal."

Haley's Hustle Helped Regals

The lead stood up until hustling Len Haley, a real pepper-pot all night, shot through the legs of a converging Cougar defenseman and squeezed his shot between Pelletier and the post.

That was at 2:55 and at 10:21 of same period, Johnson's fore-checking paid off, combined with some sloppy Cougar clearing. The Cougars were trying to bring the puck out of their own zone, something they are notoriously weak at, when a Victoria player failed to pick up a pass. He kept the puck inside the Victoria zone and Johnson whipped in to snare the puck, shot at Pelletier and then pushed in his own rebound after Pelletier made the initial save.

It was Don Chipuka who put "What he needs," said Kearns, "is a couple of more fights under his belt before he takes on another hard hitter like that Machen. He could use a couple of breathers, maybe in Europe in about six weeks."

He said he would like Maxim to fight Willie Pastrano or Machen again after that. Maxim weighed 192 for the fight and Machen 190½ pounds.

'CONFIDENCE SHAKEN'

Referees Have Troubles, Too

The average Victoria hockey fan may find it hard to believe today, but referees have their troubles, too.

In Trail, referee Ed Robins has resigned from his Western International Hockey League position Friday, charging that the league officials inferred to him that the more misconduct penalties he called, the better it would be.

Listing several other complaints, Robins said, "my confidence has also been shaken when I have been approached by league officials prior to some games and told that the league needs money. The inference that I took was that the league wanted money from the hockey boys, as each misconduct penalty costs the player $10, which is payable to the league."

Robins is the second WHL referee to resign this season. Referee-in-chief Blair Peters resigned earlier.

CONTRACT BROKEN

Both officials resigned upon being given two weeks' notice, and Robins accused the league executive of breaking its contract with him.

Robins said in a statement that "executive first attempted to renege financially" on his contract, but that this was straightened out to his satisfaction after considerable argument.

"It has been evident to me that I have not had full support or full consideration from the majority of the league representatives," he said. "It is my understanding that league officials should stand 100 per cent behind their referees and support them at all times."

"I have not found this to be the case in the WHL. I would like to emphasize, however, that I have always found that league secretary Ray Metcalfe of Nelson and vice-president Percy Halliwell of Trail have shown me the utmost in fairness and cooperation."

Robins also said that he was "surprised and disappointed" when his comments on penalties during a Trail-Spokane game were not in a spoke report that league president Dr. Joseph Vingo had asked him to sign before the report was made out.

He also said that he had been reliably informed that a Spokane hockey official had ordered league executives to see that he did not referee any more games between Trail and Spokane and that he was then told that he would not work Trail-Spokane games in the future.

Fraser Scrambles Lew's Plan

MELBOURNE (AP) — Neale Fraser sprang a major tennis surprise today by upsetting Lew Hoad in the semi-finals of the Australian national championships. The young Aussie whipped the defending champion 7-5, 3-6, 6-1, 6-4.

The upset spoiled Hoad's hopes of winning all four major tennis titles — the Australian, French, Wimbledon and American. He won three last year and then lost out to countryman Ken Rosewall in the United States national.

It is believed that one reason Hoad remained an amateur while Rosewall turned pro was that he wanted another crack at the four-title slam.

The big Aussie ace apparently favored a strained back muscle. He played well below his top form. Fraser, on the other hand, served and volleyed at his best.

Ashley Cooper qualified to meet Fraser for the men's title by beating Malcolm Anderson in the semi-final, 6-4, 9-7, 6-4.

Shirley Fry and Althea Gibson, of the United States, breezed to a 6-2, 6-1 victory over Mary Hawton and Fay Muller, of Australia, in the women's doubles final.

Miss Gibson and Miss Fry meet Monday for the women's singles title.

Bantam Champ Billed

QUEBEC (CP)—Pat Supple, Canadian bantamweight champion from Montreal, will meet former U.S. national amateur champion Jackie Spurgeon of New York in the 10-round main event of a six-bout card at Quebec's La Tour arena Monday night.

Supple won the championship last year by defeating Gil Geekie of London, Ont.

Scramble Looms For House Seats

Interest Hits All-Time High

A scramble for seats in the public galleries is expected at the state opening of the B.C. Legislature by Lieutenant-Governor Frank Ross on Thursday, Feb. 7.

"I have never known the public show so much interest in the opening of the House before," a commissioner at the legislative buildings said.

"We have had a great number of inquiries during the past week."

There are 115 seats in the public galleries in addition to the 350 seats for special guests and the 70 seats allocated among electoral ridings.

The public seats will be issued on a first-come first-served basis and queues are expected on opening day.

Each MLA in the House has the privilege of inviting two personal guests.

One of the factors drawing public interest is the threatened squabble over dismissals of Edgar A. Jamieson, sergeant-at-arms, and W. B. Monteith, law clerk.

Mr. Monteith said he will attend the House opening in his usual role despite the government's desire to remove him. New men have been appointed to both posts.

MODERATE LENGTH
Premier Bennett has forecast that the coming session will be of "moderate length"—possibly shorter than the 1956 session which lasted from Jan. 17 to March 2.

He says there will be no night sittings if they can be avoided, but most political observers believe the opposition will force him to change his mind by vigorously attacking government policies.

The session will be opened as usual with a speech from the throne delivered by the lieutenant-governor.

Royal Canadian Navy personnel from HMCS Naden will form a royal guard at the opening and music will be provided by the band of HMCS Naden under the direction of Bandmaster CPO H. Bateman of Victoria.

The royal guard consists of 100 men selected from various training establishments in Naden. First officer of the guard will be Lieut. E. B. Stole of Edmonton, Alta. The second officer will be Sub-Lieut. John Harwood of Victoria.

10-Day Job To Repair Saanich School

Alterations to Cedar Hill School, damaged by fire from an overheated furnace Friday morning, are expected to take about 10 days.

Meanwhile about 135 grade 3-5 pupils will take classes at Doncaster School, where provisional arrangements for them have been made.

Buildings and lands superintendent R. Hamilton Smith said work is delayed over the weekend because Monday morning is the earliest certain equipment will be available to workmen.

TWO SHIFTS
"We'll go ahead as fast as we can and if two shifts of men will help, we'll put them on," he said. Damage to hot air ducts, ceiling joists and floor over the furnace resulted when furnace heat set fire to pitch in one of the joists. Smoke was noticed and 213 children in grades 1-5 were cleared quietly from the building and sent home.

Grades one and two will continue classes in the school annexes, others will go to temporary accommodation at Doncaster School.

In order to avoid a similar accident in future, the concrete floor of the furnace room is being lowered and the furnace dropped.

LETTERS TO DRIVERS

(In this column the Times presents letters from and to drivers about careless, discourteous or reckless infractions of driving and pedestrian rules. When you see one, just send in the place, date and time, and what happened. DON'T give the number of the offending vehicle. Only initials of complainants will be used.)

TODAY'S BEEFS

It happens every day. You are driving in the left-hand lane. The car ahead of you stops for a red light. Naturally, you stop behind him. The light changes to green. Then—and not until then—the driver signals he is going to make a left turn. He has to wait for oncoming traffic, and you are stuck behind him—often long enough to miss the light. Drivers should signal in time for cars behind to swing into the inside lane.—M.E.

At 3:45 p.m. Thursday a lady proceeded slowly and cautiously eastward on Pandora Avenue to the junction, delaying cars behind her. The other cars stopped for the yellow light, but she drove on directly into the red light and made a left turn down Fort Street. The fact that other cars were held up is immaterial, but certainly her caution was spotty and she could have caused an accident driving into a red light. She drove a fairly late model Hillman, light brown or buff in color.—O. R. N.

Shivering Crew Yearns For Peru

Likely candidates for the coldest persons in the Victoria area today are the officers and men of BAP Rimac, 6,800-ton freighter owned by the Peruvian government.

The Rimac is at Esquimalt government dock, undergoing repairs.

She is a 50-year-old ship, built for the tropic trade—and totally lacking in the usual steam heating system found on most freighters.

Only source of warmth aboard is from small kerosene heaters, which are inclined to give off more kerosene odor than heat.

CLEAR BY SUNDAY

She was outbound Thursday night from Vancouver for Puerto Rico when trouble developed, and had to put in to Esquimalt Harbor. Yarrows Ltd. have the work in hand, and expect to clear the ship by noon Sunday.

BAP Rimac (the "BAP" means "ship of the Peruvian Navy") is manned by officers and men of the regular navy, combines sea-training routines with the humble but useful trade of a tramp steamer.

She was built in 1907 by Blohm & Voss, Hamburg, Germany, as SS Eten, and has the very modest service speed of 12 knots.

Commanding officer is Captain de Fragata Jose Namihas—who is today confined to his cabin with a severe cold in the head.

TRAFFIC FINES

In city court Friday: John W. Prout, Portage la Prairie, Man., $35, careless driving Dec. 19 when his car was involved in a collision at Herald and Government, causing $950 damage.

Bernard E. La Pointe, 618 Francis, $35, careless driving when he collided with the rear of another auto slowed in traffic on Douglas at Bay.

William Pinder, 1175 Schram, $35 and licence suspension, careless driving Jan. 4 when his car was struck by another auto as he attempted to cross Douglas from the stop sign at Garbally. He had pleaded not guilty.

In Sooke RCMP court today: Larry Jay, 4337 Columbia, $25 and costs, careless driving Jan. 22 when his car collided with the rear of another vehicle at the junction of Sooke and Otter Point roads.

Many garages report motorists with car radiators frozen, especially in the suburbs. One operator said that while most cars had anti-freeze in them, the solutions used were too thin for the present cold spell.

Used car lots contacted said there was no trouble with their vehicles: all had anti-freeze of sufficient strength in radiators to prevent cracking or freezing.

Victoria West Minister Quits Church Posts

Rev. C. G. MacKenzie submitted his resignation as minister of Victoria West and James Bay United Churches at annual meetings of both churches this week.

His resignation becomes effective in June after three years at the two churches.

Possibility of appointing ministers to each church will be considered at a joint James Bay-Victoria West board meeting Feb. 6.

Reports at the annual meetings showed steady growth in departments of both churches. Sunday school at James Bay has increased by 40 per cent during the past year.

DON'T AID CROOKS; KEEP OLD LICENCES

Don't throw away your 1956 car licence plates—some crook may want them.

That was the warning of police today, who said the plates should be retained until they expire at the end of next month.

Otherwise they can be used by hold-up men to throw police off their trail.

Four-Cent Drop In Coffee Prices

Retail price of most national brand coffees will be reduced four cents a pound in the majority of local stores Monday.

The cut will bring the price of major brands down to $1.16 a pound.

It is reportedly caused by competitive activity at the retail level among chains in the east.

St. Joseph's Hospital officials said today there has been "no appreciable" change in the condition of Jagit Singh Bains, 51, injured in a car-bicycle collision 14 weeks ago.

His condition is described as one of "partial consciousness." Bains suffered head injuries when he fell from his bike after it collided with a car at Douglas and Garbally Oct. 12.

European, American Religions Based on Disparate Principles

"Sweeping differences between North American and European religions were boiled down to two basic principles by a UBC sociologist lecturing at Victoria College Thursday.

"Religions on this continent are, as a whole, anti-mystical and anti-tragedy," said Dr. K. D. Naegele.

"They are based on the precept that the pain of life can be reduced. As such, they are more active and more concerned with the practical ability to answer the question 'so what?'"

In Europe, religions tend to be mystical, aesthetic and more passive. They centre on accepting the world rather than mastering it, he said.

According to sociological studies, Canadians belong to seven major religious organizations.

Of every 100 Canadians, approximately 43 are Roman Catholic; 20, United; 14, Church of England; five, Presbyterian; three, Baptist; three, Lutheran; and one, Jewish.

In general, women are more religious than men and take a greater part in church activities, but no human being is capable of living without some answers to the meaning of life, Dr. Naegele said.

"In some aspects, religion is 'the reservoir which provides the answers to our problems, but at the same time it raises problems," he said.

"For instance in the Bible to be interpreted literally, or should we believe some contradictions of science?"

Studies show that the more religious a person is, the more intolerant he becomes, Dr. Naegele claimed.

"Even the religiously tolerant are not too keen in fostering or allowing anti-religious movements," he said.

"Variation of religion is permitted, but too much variation challenges the rightness of our belief—and that is uncomfortable."

Dr. Naegele will return to Victoria College next Thursday to give his second lecture on the sociology of religion.

REV. RALPH C. WYNKOOP, REFORMED EPISCOPAL, will be the speaker at the church service at 7:30 p.m. on Sunday.

A tenor soloist, he will present vocal selections in addition to his messages.

YOU SAID TO ME -

By ETHEL TULL
A Sunday message of help and comfort for those puzzled, depressed or low in spirit.

You said to me, "Whatever God wants for you, is what we want."

It was my son who said that to me over the long-distance line from London, Ont., to St. Joseph's Hospital, where I am waiting for an operation.

This is being a wonderful experience. Cards and letters flow in every day and I am surrounded by beautiful flowers. In every letter from Ontario, Regina, Kamloops and every part of Victoria, there are the words "we are praying for you," so I am held right up to God on a cloud of prayer.

My husband and I decided to make this time of waiting a very happy one and that is just what it is.

I want to thank all my readers who have sent me so many lovely letters and cards and said so many nice things about my writings. I have so enjoyed talking with you each week, I hope to be allowed to do so again.

God is very good and very near. May He bless you all and may you always be just where He wants you to be and doing what He wants you to do.

I want to thank all my readers who have sent me so many lovely letters and cards and said so many nice things about my writings. I have so enjoyed talking with you each week, I hope to be allowed to do so again.

God is very good and very near. May He bless you all and may you always be just where He wants you to be and doing what He wants you to do.

Point Ellice Bridge Cost Estimate Pared

May Be $150,000
Less Than Expected

Point Ellice Bridge will cost $100,000 to $150,000 less than was originally anticipated, it was indicated at City Hall.

Ratepayers gave authority for expenditure of $550,000 last April. Now it is even considered possible the bridge bill won't surpass the $400,000 mark.

Council opened tenders Thursday for the decking and approach work, which had been estimated at over $150,000.

OTHER OUTLAYS

Dominion Bridge of Vancouver was earlier awarded contract for supply and erection of steel for $339,500. B.C. sales tax on the steel will add $5,800. The city will reinforce the steel at a cost of $27,455 and federal tax is set at $1,445. Engineering has been contracted at $27,000 and is being carried out by A. B. Sanderson and Co. Ltd.

Council was told possible deductions and contributions by the federal government, the Canadian National Railway, the Board of Transport and the B.C. Government amount to $244,590.

Cost of repairs to old piers which will be used as the new foundation has been established at $72,000.

The report on the bridge costs was drawn up for council by city engineer James C. Garnett.

Funds for the complete project are already on hand having been collected in recent years from sale of tax-reverted properties and earmarked for the bridge.

TRAFFIC FINES

In city court Thursday:
Agnes Lamont Wallace, 3721 Quadra, $35 and licence suspension, careless driving Jan. 2, when she drove through a stop sign on Bay at Cook, colliding with another car.

Douglas Mann, 2818 Heath, $35, careless driving Jan. 12, when his car slammed into the rear of another auto slowed in traffic on Government Street, pushing it into a car ahead and causing total damage of $800. Police said Mann's brakes were faulty.

Jens Olsen, 2280 Forbes, $25, no B.C. driver's licence, and $35 for careless driving Jan. 11, when his car was in collision with another auto at Bay and Fernwood after going through a stop sign. Magistrate H. C. Hall said he would make a report to the motor vehicles branch on possible suspension.

Anna Radcliffe, 3036 Fifth, $35 and licence suspension, careless driving Jan. 14, when she attempted a left turn from North Park on to Blanshard, collided with a truck, and caromed off against three parked cars, causing $1,000 damage.

In Saanich court Thursday:
Terrance H. Whittemore, 1193 Reynolds, $25 for passing over a double centre line and $15 for failing to pull over to the side of the road for an emergency vehicle. Langford Fire Chief Rod Bayles said Whittemore's car struck his stretcher-equipped car which was bringing a patient to hospital.

Frederick William Adams, 340 Gorge, $35 and licence suspension, careless driving Jan. 12, when his car collided with another vehicle at Maddock and Tillicum.

John Albert Barnes, 849 Reed, $35, careless driving Dec. 21, when his car was involved in a collision on the Pat Bay Highway.

In city court Wednesday:
Keith Malcolm McKay, $35 and licence suspension, careless driving when he attempted a left-hand turn from Douglas near Discovery and collided with another car.

Richard Jackson, 3168 Jackson, $35, careless driving Jan. 12 when he bent down to retrieve a cigar which had fallen from his mouth, and his auto crashed into the rear of another car stopped in traffic on Quadra at Topaz.

In city court Tuesday:
Joseph Wilson Whyte, 713 Pembroke, $35, careless driving Dec. 10, when he collided with a pole at Bay and Turner after his car went out of control while passing another vehicle.

A RECORD-SHATTERING CONSTRUCTION YEAR HIGHLIGHTS B. C.'s AMAZING PROGRESS

CAPITAL EXPENDITURES MORE THAN DOUBLE
ANY PREVIOUS YEAR IN B.C. ELECTRIC HISTORY

Laying the 36-mile B.C. Electric Natural Gas pipeline from Huntingdon to the City Gate at the South end of Patullo Bridge.

Transferring the shore end of the submarine cable from cable ship "Ocean Layer" to barge.

Work in progress on Pemberton-Rosedale section of the 2nd Bridge River transmission line, which will ultimately operate at 345,000 volts.

Here's a dramatic illustration of British Columbia's phenomenal growth.

During the past decade, B.C. Electric's construction program has topped previous records again and again as facilities to provide electric, gas, and transit services have been expanded to pace the development of the province.

In 1955... a year of remarkable business activity here... B.C. Electric spent $43 million... by far the greatest sum laid out in capital improvements in any one year since the company was formed in 1897. Yet last year $93 million... more than double this previous record... was required for facilities to ensure there will be plenty of low-cost energy to encourage industrial growth here, to create more jobs and payrolls, to provide better living for more people.

1957 will be a year of intensified effort. A report on B.C. Electric construction plans will be brought to you soon. They call for greater-than-ever investment in British Columbia's bright future.

SOME OF THE MAJOR ACCOMPLISHMENTS IN 1956:

- ★ Natural Gas was brought to the Lower Mainland.
- ★ 58,500 h.p. of new electric power capacity was placed in service, and substantial progress made on five power developments.
- ★ A submarine cable circuit combining the world's highest capacity, highest voltage and greatest unsplined length linked Vancouver Island to the Mainland power supply.
- ★ The lower Coastal area was linked to the Mainland power supply, providing for industrial expansion at Powell River and throughout the area.
- ★ 16 new substations on the Mainland and on Vancouver Island were placed in service.
- ★ 24 trolley coaches were added to the Mainland urban transit system.
- ★ A new Head Office building was brought to near-completion.

Hungary Holds Britons as Spies

VIENNA (Reuters) — Four British students missing in Hungary since Jan. 14 will be tried by Hungarian court on espionage charges, a communiqué issued in Budapest today said. The four were arrested Jan. 17.

The four are Judith Cripps, 19, granddaughter of Sir Stafford Cripps; Roger Cooper, 21, a nephew of poet Robert Graves; Christopher Lord, 22, and his brother, Basil Lord, 23.

They entered Hungary Jan. 14 with a transit visa permitting them 24 hours to drive through the country to Austria. The communiqué said the four had false documents which were issued "in the name of the Soviet kommandatura in Budapest on Jan. 12 1956."

It said the four also were in possession of letters from Hungarian students who had fled to Britain.

"They had the task of obtaining details about the Soviet and Hungarian armies and about political and economic conditions in Hungary," the communiqué said.

A statement from the ministry of interior added that Cooper and Christopher Lord were in Hungary last November "without valid passports and both took part in activities of counter-revolutionary groups."

Kashmir Seizure Sparks Rioting

KARACHI, Pakistan (Reuters) — Steel-helmeted police clashed with angry crowds in Pakistani cities today as protests mounted against the integration of Kashmir into India.

Police hurled tear-gas bombs into a procession of several thousand outside the office of the Indian deputy high commissioner in Hyderabad, West Pakistan.

Reports reaching here said several police were injured in a bitter skirmish with students in the crowd.

In Lahore, a parade of some 150,000 Pakistanis marched to the Indian high commission office carrying black flags. They burned an effigy of Indian Prime Minister Nehru in the street.

In Dacca, East Pakistan, black flags were draped from houses and people in the streets wore black badges with the words: "India, hands off Kashmir."

Offices, stores and schools shut down and black flags were hoisted following the midnight announcement in Jammu, Kashmir, that the part of Kashmir occupied by Indian troops now is "an integral part of the Indian Union." India and Pakistan occupy separate areas of Kashmir, divided by a cease-fire line.

The Karachi Morning News said that if the United Nations fails to settle the Pakistani-Indian argument over Kashmir, the issue will be decided by "the arbitration of war."

Newcastle, three-times winner of the cup in the last five seasons, lost an away game to Millwall 2-1.

But more astonishing was the 1-0 home defeat of Wolverhampton, strong contender in the first division this year, to Bournemouth. The Wolves are considered nearly unbeatable at home even against first division clubs.

Two other first division teams lost to second division clubs, Cardiff City bowing 1-0 at home to Barnsley while Portsmouth, also at home, was beaten 3-1 by Nottingham Forest.

'Cat's Meow' Not Worth $20,000

Not With Cat's Meowing

GLENDORA, Calif. (UP) — Occupants of a new $20,000 home — labeled as the "Cat's Meow" — today vowed to move out unless a cat which has been haunting the dwelling for the past 20 days with around-the-clock wails is found "dead or alive."

The cat is believed to be trapped somewhere within the walls of the new home.

"We can't stand it any longer," said Vincent Carta, "the meowing is driving us crazy."

But the Cartas weren't the only ones with cat troubles. The home is still in escrow and building contractor H. Elliott won't get his money until the cat mystery is cleared up.

"If that cat isn't found dead or alive soon, we are not going to stay here," Carta said. "I would rather lose my money than stay here knowing the cat is around."

Latest theory of how the cat could become trapped came from Elliott. He said recently a hole was made in the side of the house to install a telephone.

"That darn cat must have crawled through the hole," Elliott added.

Rangers Clobber Boston

BOSTON (CP) — New York Rangers scored two goals in the last period today to pull away from Boston Bruins and win 5-3 after the teams had thrown three-goal clusters at each other in a free-scoring second period.

Larry Popein and Camille Henry scored the third-period goals in the nationally televised game.

The victory left Rangers three points behind the fourth-place Toronto Maple Leafs in the National Hockey League race. The Leafs must defeat Detroit Red Wings tonight.

Popein's own team was short-handed when he broke a 3-3 deadlock, getting loose on a break-away and scoring from close range on goalie Don Simmons. Boston's rookie making his NHL debut, Popein took a loose puck near his own blue line and sprinted ahead while the Bruins were concentrating on pressing their man-power advantage. New York's Jack Evans was in the penalty box for holding.

Sandys to Visit Ottawa Next Week

OTTAWA (BUP) — Britain's defence minister, Duncan Sandys, will come to Canada next week to confer with Defence Minister Ralph Campney, Defence Production Minister C. D. Howe and the chiefs of Canada's armed services.

A defence official said Sandys probably would discuss closer integration of British and Canadian forces on North Atlantic Treaty service in Europe.

'Go It Alone' Dulles 'Roaming Among Prickly Pears' Says Press

LONDON (UP) — British newspapers were up in arms today over U.S. Secretary of State Dulles' remark in a Senate committee hearing that he would feel safer in the Middle East without British or French soldiers at his side.

(Dulles made the statement in off-the-cuff questioning during a Senate committee hearing into the Eisenhower Middle East doctrine. Shortly afterward the State department rushed an explanation that he wasn't questioning the fighting ability of Britons or Frenchmen; only the political effects of their armies into any Middle East situation).

"Mr. (Go It Alone) Dulles insulted Britain again," said The Daily Sketch.

Many British newspapers carried a paraphrase of Dulles' remark as the sub-headline.

The influential Manchester Guardian said Dulles "is roaming again among the prickly pears of the English language."

In its editorial, The Guardian said Dulles did not mean what he said.

The Communist Daily Worker also exploited Dulles' remark.

IKE, MACMILLAN TO MEET?

New U.K.-U.S. Move To Patch Up Rift

LONDON (UP) — Plans for a top-level meeting between President Eisenhower and Prime Minister Harold Macmillan are under way, diplomatic sources said here today.

The meeting will probably take place in March. Present plans are to prepare the way for conference well in advance, by creating an improved atmosphere and by sorting out problems which require a priority settlement.

The meeting would be the first get-together between the president and a British prime minister since the ex-premier, Sir Anthony Eden, talked to Eisenhower a year ago in Washington.

Some British diplomats are advising against an immediate Macmillan-Eisenhower meeting, claiming it could give the impression that Britain's prime minister is rushing to Washington as "suppliant."

But top-bracket government quarters are anxious that the heart-to-heart talk should take place as soon as is feasible.

There is no firm Western policy front at present toward Russia. The absence of such a joint Western Middle East policy is held to necessitate a clear definition of tasks, so that each of the Big Powers knows where it stands and where it is supposed to go.

British Defence Minister Duncan Sandys, on a visit to the U.S., is expected to put out the first feelers on the projected conference.

Late in the spring or in the early summer, Macmillan expects to meet the Commonwealth prime ministers, probably in London for talks on mending recent rifts and strengthening their bonds.

'FEEL SAFER' REMARK STIRS TEMPEST IN BRITAIN

'Go It Alone' Dulles 'Roaming Among Prickly Pears' Says Press

Dulles takes new swipe at Britain," its headline read. But the Times of London buried the remark in a story from Washington headlined "New Attack on Mr. Dulles," which spoke of a direct Democratic attempt to force his resignation.

The Daily Express said Dulles was speaking "off the cuff" and said he is "a man to whom the right words do not come easily."

Calling Dulles the most powerful diplomat of the age but not the most diplomatic, the Express said: "He is engaged in trying to improvise in haste an American policy for the Middle East where no American policy existed before. Before Mr. Dulles has finished with his task he may well feel 'a lot safer' to have the active support of Britain and France."

In its editorial, the Manchester Guardian said Dulles "has not yet matched in quality Defence Secretary Charles E. Wilson whose infelicities—dividing the unemployed into 'bird dogs' and 'kennel fed dogs' for instance—are few, but roses."

"But Mr. Dulles may catch up by sheer accumulation."

U.S. VIEWPOINT WORRIES BRITONS, SAYS SANDYS

NEW YORK (AP) — Questioned on his arrival today from London about State Secretary Dulles' remarks, British Defence Minister Duncan Sandys replied: "I'd like to say quite frankly that in Britain the recent American attitude towards us did come as a great shock. ... Despite everything I am quite sure the friendship between our two countries remains unshaken, and I thank God for that, since on it depends the peace of the world."

Seven-Day Cold Spell To Break

A break in the cold spell that has held Vancouver Island and the lower mainland in a paralyzing grip for the last week is expected Monday.

The cold air mass covering B.C. is moving gradually east, and mild Pacific air is edging toward the coast with above-freezing temperatures.

Weatherman William Mackie said maximum and minimum temperatures will rise gradually with the onset of the mild air, which caused high cloud over the city today.

26 TONIGHT

"Our overnight minimum was 17.7 degrees, and tonight we are predicting 20 degrees," he said. "Friday's maximum temperature was 24 degrees, but we are expecting a maximum of 30 on Sunday."

Temperature at noon today was 25 degrees. Children enjoying one of the best sessions of out-door skating won't be happy when warm weather comes, but to most of Victoria it will be a blessing.

WEARY

Plumbers have been working steadily at thawing pipes since the vicious wind of Friday morning (see page 15), and taxi drivers and delivery men are weary of fighting ice and snow on sidewalks.

Weekly report of the National Employment Service showed 700 more persons out of work now than at the same time last year, almost wholly because of adverse working conditions outdoors.

There are 4,058 persons out of work, said C. A. Mudge, manager of the local office, an increase of 219 in the past week.

ICEBREAKER

LACK OF CREDENTIALS KEPT CLAN CHIEF OUT

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — A Canadian immigration official said Friday night that Dame Flora MacLeod, chief of the Clan MacLeod, was refused entry to Canada because "she would have had a rough time getting back into the United States again."

Dame MacLeod arrived here for a press conference but neglected to bring any credentials.

Immigration officials said it was "for her own protection" that she was not allowed to enter Canada. They allowed her to meet with newsmen in the immigration office and then she returned to Detroit.

Dame MacLeod is currently on a tour of the United States and plans to visit Toronto and Montreal later.

She told reporters she had forgotten to bring even a passport.

Northwest Hit by Sharp Earth Tremors

Residents of Fairfield and other low-lying, land-filled, marshy areas felt the brunt of earthquake tremors which rattled through the Pacific Northwest between 3.12 and 5.16 p.m. Friday.

There was no serious damage reported in the affected area bounded by Victoria, Gulf Islands, Lower Mainland, Everett, Seattle and Olympia, the centre estimated at about Everett.

Shock cracked a wall in an old building at Anacortes, the only damage reported, although houses trembled, lights swayed, plaster cracked and dishes rattled in many areas.

Dominion Astrophysical Observatory director Dr. R. M. Petrie said it could be considered only a mild shock and that observatory staff did not feel it because of the rocky nature of the terrain.

Some residents of Victoria felt a distinct jarring shock lasting several seconds, diminishing to a light vibration which lasted about a minute.

Geologists at the University of Washington, in Seattle, said their seismograph indicated the quake centre about 25 miles north, or Everett.

FOR SERVANTS

Collective Bargaining Under Study

OTTAWA (CP)—Cabinet ministers have agreed to investigate whether civil servants should be allowed to bargain collectively with the government, a Canadian Labor Congress official said Friday.

L. E. Wismer, director of the C.L.C. department dealing with government employees, made the statement after a Congress delegation urged collective bargaining rights in a meeting with cabinet members.

Mr. Wismer headed a C.L.C. delegation that renewed demands on behalf of civil service employees, of whom about 50,000 are scattered through various service associations and trade unions affiliated with the congress.

The suggestion was made at a private meeting with Labor Minister Gregg, Finance Minister Harris and State Secretary Pinard.

Prime Minister St. Laurent said earlier the government has ordered a study of the British system of collective bargaining with government employees but added he was not promising anything.

ISLAND DIGEST Recreation Privileges Asked in Watersheds

CHEMAINUS — Chemainus Rod and Gun Club has endorsed a resolution sponsored by the Cowichan Fish and Game Club asking that supervised recreation be permitted in all B.C. watershed areas.

Club president Don Anderson said the resolution was particularly pertinent here as North Cowichan municipality had applied for a watershed licence on the Holyoak Lake-Mt. Brenton area. He had heard that this area was already closed to anglers and hunters.

Game commission fisheries biologist Dave Hurn of Nanaimo told the meeting there was "no consistency in protection offered water consumers or in the control of water supplies on Vancouver Island."

Regulations covering the various watershed areas were made "at the whim of the body regulating the water."

Several Island communities allow no recreation in their watershed area, others permit partial recreation, and many have no type of restriction or closure whatsoever, he said.

"The argument for prohibition of recreation in watershed areas is not sound," Mr. Hurn said, "and cannot be backed up by fact. There has never been any proven case where the recreational use of a watershed area has resulted in the contamination of a water supply."

SMALL FEE

He said many U.S. communities were able to pay the capital cost of their water systems by charging a small fee for fishing in reservoirs and watersheds.

"I think it is up to us to bring all the facts on this subject before the regulatory bodies concerned," he said.

Two proposed changes in the federal fisheries regulations were approved for discussion. Members agreed to a plan to charge a $10 licence for non-resident salt water fishermen, and a proposal that would extend the commercial fishing boundary farther away from the mouth of the Chemainus River.

Elk Falls To Dry Up

CAMPBELL RIVER — Vancouver Island's pressing needs for electrical power will doom the famous Elk Falls on Campbell River to extinction for at least two or three years, and perhaps longer.

Until now the B.C. Power Commission has diverted water over the falls during the tourist season, but commission officials have said that until there is no power shortage on Vancouver Island, all water in the system will go through the turbines at the John Hart hydro plant.

ISLAND VIEWPOINT

Action Needed

COURTENAY ARGUS—Idea of a recreation improvement district currently being mooted for this area is worthy of everyone's immediate attention and action.

At present there is no legal means whereby a proper sharing by the district can be assured for recreation services of mutual benefit.

As a result, one municipality has to subsidize a facility used by the entire area, as in the case of the Courtenay swimming pool for one instance.

There is much reason to believe the government is in a mood to accept the growing trends in recreation, and this district stands a good chance of getting in on the ground floor of any benefits from experiments the government may undertake in these new directions.

Fire Districts

SIDNEY REVIEW—This entire area is growing. And one certain sign of development is the activity towards formation of two fire districts, one in North Saanich and the other on Salt Spring Island. Communities can spring into being and develop to a certain point by voluntary donations to pay for fire protection. Beyond that point the donor system falls down and the necessary funds must be raised by direct taxation. This step has already been taken in North Saanich and is in process of coming into being on Salt Spring.

Everyone whose property is protected by Sidney and North Saanich Volunteer Fire Department will hope that these (developments) will bear early fruit.

Perpetual Timber

COWICHAN LEADER — The bringing down of the second Sloan Report on B.C.'s forest industry is awaited with keen interest.

Sustained yield was the chief justice's preoccupation in the first report. It is safe to say it will be in the second, though now he is faced with blueprinting an orderly transition from present liquidation policies to the type of forestry which must come. To make it clear to the small logger that he, too, must subscribe to a new set of conditions under sustained yield will be a major part of Chief Justice Sloan's task.
